HENRY SATER

1690-1754.

---

The Recital of the Life and Character of an Early Adventurer to Virginia, and Subsequently a Settler of the Province of Maryland under Lord Baltimore. A Representative Colonist, whose Industry enabled him to become a prosperous Planter, and whose strong religious convictions led to the Organization of the Parent Baptist Society of the Province, and through whose Liberality their First Church Building was Erected. He gave his Name to the Hills which marked his Settlement, and left a Line of Descendants, many of whom in their turn became Pioneers and Settlers of other States.

"Consider The Years of Many Generations." - Deut. XXII-VII.

P-E-B-P-A-C-T

On no! we live our life armin;
Or w<sup>re</sup> only touched or coldly dim
The pictures of the past remain—
Man's works shall follow him.

— Thittier.

Peter Faneuil, a rich merchant of Boston, Massachusetts, in the year 1740, offered to build and devote to the people of that town, a market house and town hall, which was completed in 1742, when the citizens, in testimony of their gratitude, at a town meeting, resolved that it be called and known by the name of the donor. Such was the origin of the celebrated "Faneuil Hall" of Boston, widely known as the "Cradle of Liberty."

In the same year, and in a similar manner, a humble church structure (the pioneer of its denomination in the Maryland colony) was erected near Baltimore, through the generosity of an English colonist, who, in making this gift, dedicated the land and building to the Baptists forever.

Both contemporaneous edifices still bear the names of their founders. While the former was burned and rebuilt, the latter is yet standing, and continues to be used for the original purpose for which it was designed. With all the progress,—the swift and frequent changes—so characteristic of American life, it is seldom that any building is occupied for the same purpose for even a century; but when such structure survives until, in the language of Oliver Wendell Holmes, "a hundred years and fifty more had spread their leaves and snows," it is a monument of historical interest.

The founder of this old landmark in Maryland was Henry Latzer, an original settler, or, according to the chronicles of that period, an "ancient planter."

"When the mind reverts to the earliest days of colonial history the period seems remote and obscure," writes J. Fenimore Cooper. "The thousand changes that thicken along the links of recollection throwing back the origin of the nation to a day so distant as seemingly to reach the mists of time; and yet four lives of ordinary duration would suffice to transmit, from mouth to mouth, in form of tradition, all that civilized man has achieved within the limits of the American republic."

The writer's earliest recollections go back to the time, when a child at his grandmother's knee, he first heard the story of 'Grandfather Sater' from the lips of one who had received it from Sater's youngest daughter, Discretion.

Thus the family records and traditions of their progenitor have been transmitted to each succeeding generation, and kept alive for over a century.

"Our lips shall tell them to our sons,
And they again to theirs,
That generations yet unborn
May teach them to their heirs."

This brief narrative, in which these unwritten stories and historical accounts are collected together and here presented, is not intended as an eulogium of the subject of this biography, but is solely for the purpose of rescuing them from their fragmentary condition and preserving them for those who bear the same blood in their veins.

It is principally because his life is full of associations of the historic Chesapeake province and its earliest Baptist church, - a heritage of colonial days, -- that we treasure these memories.

"The revival of interest in Colonial and evolutionary times has become a marked feature of the life of today," writes the authoress of "Through Colonial Doorways." "Its manifestations are to be found in the literature which hasrown up around these periods, and in the painstaking individual research being made among documents and records of the past with genealogical and historical intent."

The outlines of the career of this individual are memorable for many reasons, aside from being an early colonist and pioneer of the province, founder of the parent society of a large denomination in Maryland and progenitor of a long line of descendants who have in their turn been pioneers in the settlement of other states and territories, but his history is interspersed with many noteworthy events connected with the growth of this country during the first half of the eighteenth century.

Much of the documentary testimony from the archives of the State of Maryland herein contained is published for the first time. Hon. Phillip L. Laird, Commissioner of the Land Office of that State, in a report to the Governor, referring to the files of his office, remarks:

"These records are invaluable. The original of almost every land title in the State is here, and vast stores of family and colonial history await the diligent student of these pages."

While this biography is not proposed as a genealogy of the family, it must necessarily include the descendants, to which has been added a cursory account of those whose lives are known and accessible - and is believed to be accurate for those early generations, having been corrected and verified from wills, family bibles and genealogies.

With the later descendants it has not been possible to secure complete registers of all their branches, owing to continual migrations, and the number of states and extent of territory through which they are dispersed.

In tracing out their lineage and arranging the groupings of the various members of this family in their proper order one cannot fail to observe the steady movement West, where the greatest number are collected, while the next largest proportion are distributed through the Southern States.

The family stream does not appear to have travelled north beyond New York, where his grandson, Isaac Walker, settled in 1631, and whose descendants constitute the only representatives north of Maryland.

Mr. Thomas L. Bater, of Weston, Olio, writes: "There are numerous descendants. They are scattered through Ohio, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas and Illinois and Dakota. I have never heard of any batters that were not descendants of the Henry Bater that I have mentioned."

While this purports to be a memoir of the individual referred to above, it necessarily includes a full account of the church which he founded.

Intent on the spiritual welfare of his fellow settlers, and leading an exemplary Christian life, his thirty odd years of frontier life in the forests of the Chesapeake colony culminated in that first expression of the pioneer's religion - a meeting house.

Lest it may be thought that this compilation relates too much to the religious associations of our progenitor, "it should be remembered that in no other way could the peculiar traits in the character of our ancestors be fully developed. It was the religious doctrines that they embraced, and the consequent principles of religious and civil liberty which they could not enjoy in their own land, that induced such a company of gentlemen, merchants and mechanics, to emigrate from the populous and cultivated towns of their fatherland to this then wilderness, and exchange, as many of them did, the sword, the awl, the needle and the yard-stick for the axe, the anvil and the plough; and to omit a sufficient allusion to their religious principles and their actual development in practice would be to narrate effects and not notice the cause which produced them."

"No one can justly appreciate the character of our forefathers and the sacrifices which they made for posterity without a knowledge of those principles which like a mainspring set everything in motion."

CHAPTER I.

Two hundred years! — two hundred years
How much of human power and pride,
What glorious hopes, what gloomy fears
Have sunk beneath the noiseless tide.
— Pierpont.

"First things are interesting. The first step is proverbial. The first stone laid in a foundation may aid in supporting a beautiful palace or a lofty monument. In this day of centenary celebrations, every one is looking backward to the first beginnings of the great enterprises which now occupy public attention. Among the movements most interesting to the lovers of religious progress is that of the Baptist denomination in the State of Maryland."

The pioneer of this sect in that section would command more attention than he usually receives from the brief notices in the annals of early American churches were the historical incidents with which his life is interwoven better known.

Although only a layman, he was connected with the origin and growth of the baptists in his adopted province, and organized their first church and erected the building.

"So far as accessible records show," says Scharf in his History of Baltimore, "the first resident Baptist in Maryland was Henry Sater."

While the career of this first baptist of that region is marked by no thrilling episode or extraordinary event, his constancy and devotion to the same faith which the renowned Roger Williams espoused in the New England colony, has linked his name indissolubly with the history of the denomination in Maryland.

To gather together the threads of a life which sprang into existence more than two centuries ago, and weave a connected narrative, is well nigh impossible, but family tradition has preserved much of the outlines.

Henry Sater (or Souter, Sator, Saytor and Satyr, as the name is variously spelled in ancient documents) was born of English parents in the year 1690, in one of the western shires of England, during the reign of King William the Third.

Shortly after the close of the seventeenth century there arrived in Virginia a band of adventurers from England, who came to settle the new country of the western world. Among them was young Sater, scarcely nineteen years old, who at this early age cast his destinies with these hardy settlers of the infant colonies.

This expression "adventurer," now associated "with one who seeks occasions of chance," etc., was formerly applied to all original settlers.

"whereas, the adventurers to plant that our Province of Maryland have sent unto us," etc., etc., says Lord Baltimore in one of his earliest proclamations, and in all state papers the use of the word is synonymous with "planter."

John Filby says that after obtaining his original grant "Lord Baltimore sent out his brother Leonard Calvert, Esq., accompanied by other Gentlemen and their attendants, to the number of between two and three hundred for the purpose of commencing a settlement. The adventurers are represented to have been chiefly persons of considerable wealth and distinction, who left their country to avoid the inconveniences of religious intolerance."

Another author says: "Among the religionists who, distrust or persecution had early driven into the voluntary exile of the colonies there were more than an usual proportion of men of character and education. The reckless and the gay, younger sons, soldiers unespoused, and students from the inns of courts, early sought advancement and adventure in the more southern provinces where slaves offered impunity from labour," etc.

Of Sater's ancestry we are informed that but little has been preserved of the pedigrees of his family other than that his parents were of Danish extraction, and that he was a person of means, and was not obliged to come here from stern necessity.

One of his descendants, whose mother was a granddaughter and namesake of one of later's daughters, writes:

"My mother frequently told me that she thought she had heard that the later family was descended from or of the same family as that of Bishop Sater, an early British martyr, whom I think she fondly referred to in Fuller's Church History or Worthies of England."

The causes which induced young Henry to emigrate and the circumstances under which he left his native land, his companions on the voyage, and all the interesting memories which go to make up the warp and woof of his early manhood cannot be recalled at this remote period, but the principal features of the life of this young traveller after renouncing this country have been handed down through family records and traditions, and the story of his subsequent career clearly established.

The earliest account contained in a family register and transmitted from his children to the grandchildren is as viz.:

"It may be said of him that he was among the early adventurers to this country. At the age of 19, in the year 1709, in the reign of Queen Anne, he left England and arrived in company with other adventurers and landed at Little York or Smith Point, in Virginia. By tradition many pleasing anecdotes are told of this young adventurer in the new world, both among the settlers and the Indians, but possibly fancy might have exaggerated the merits of the youth."

Other accounts state that he disembarked near Jamestown, while another tradition is that he first established himself in lower Virginia.

Although these family reports are at variance as to the precise location of his first settlement, all agree that it was on the Virginia coast.

We learn further that -

"It appears that Henry Sater kept in view a previous intention of becoming a planter. From some cause or other he left Virginia and made his way to Maryland. It is understood he visited the different landings on the western shore of the State, viz.: Elk Ridge, Back River, Bush, Gunpowder, the Patapsco and Baltimore."

The population of the whole province then was scarce thirty thousand and the settlements were distributed along the shores of the Chesapeake bay and on the banks of the principal streams.

It was in the vicinity of the place he last visited that our adventurer selected the site of his plantation, for, says an historian, "about the year 1729 Mr. Henry Sater, of England, purchased a tract of land on what was then known as Chestnut Ridge, about 9 miles northwest of Baltimore Town."

This historian adds: "It is not probable that as yet (1729) there was a population of more than one thousand in the whole county, which extended from below the Patapsco river to the north line of the Province, a distance in a direct line from north to south of more than forty miles, and a considerable portion of it was on the south side of the Patapsco. The rest, save on the Susquehanna and Bush river neighborhood, were scattered along the bay. Little land could as yet have been brought under cultivation, and a house of unhewn timber from the wild forests afforded the most comfortable dwelling posssed by any one. The original terms for settling lands in this country indeed had materially hindered the increase of population. Not only had the time fixed for the emigrants sailing from England been too short as well as unreasonable, but each one was obliged to keep three servants, above three years old, upon his plantation, which many were not able to do. Besides all this, through this vast region of wild forest lay the great war path of the "Susquehannocks," and more northern Indians, in their too frequent forays on the Piscataway nation on the Patuxent."

It must be remembered that "less than one hundred and fifty years ago, and within the age of four generations, America was distinctively the home of the Indians; only a narrow strip of land bordering the Atlantic had been reclaimed to civilization, and even then this small section possessed very few of the comforts of the period, as compared with the mother country and nations of Europe."

After acquiring his homestead that this enterprising young Englishman entered upon his colonial life by settling this rough, wooded country, then "frontier." He probably began by felling trees, cutting paths, hewing logs and building one of those old-time cabins with the huge outside chimney of rough stones gathered in the vicinity; and when he had made it weather-tight, hung his trusty rifle and powder horn on the overhanging rafters, and then started to clear and till a patch of virgin soil, and sow his first tobacco crop.

These cabins of the first settlers are described as log houses of two rooms only, a bedroom and kitchen, with an adjoining shed for the live stock, "where the horse trough was the family wash basin, where stools and benches, hung against the wall, constituted the furniture; where the kitchen table served for dining table as well, and was handsomely set out with bowls, trenchers and noggins of wood, and gourds and squashes daintily cut, to add color to the meal; while the family was counted well off that could muster a few spoons, and a plate or two of shining pewter."

Like all the colonists of that period, Sater was engaged for the first few years of his settlement in the struggle for a home, during which time we have no details of the hardships which he encountered, probably because they did not differ from the usual trials and difficulties experienced by the first settlers. They must have included many deprivations, scarcity of tools and implements, and all the annoyances from an environment of savages in an inaccessible forest, where every necessity of life had to be obtained from a great distance.

He continued raising tobacco, improving his settling and extending the acreage of his crops with the help of slaves until his modest homestead had become quite a domain.

Slaves were a necessary adjunct of every plantation at this time, and were universally employed in this section of the country.

The Sater family history remarks:

"The prospect of success in the planting of tobacco in a great measure depends on the number of hands in the employ. These as I suppose must have been procured from the slave ships visiting the colony, of which slaves it is said he possessed a considerable number. I was personally acquainted with one of them 'Old Guinea Simon.' East of his dwelling and north of his barn was the burial ground for his slaves. This ground was improved by his daughter Discretion by planting it with cherry trees.'

And further adds:

"All taxes and purchases are payable in tobacco. The English and Spanish coin in the province only served for pocket money. It is possible he had resources in England and drew from them as he shipped tobacco on his own account and ordered that which was for his family and plantation."

This ancient slaves cemetery referred to above is pointed out on the estate of the late George Brown, known as Brookland-wood Manor, and has been visited by the writer, where vestiges of the old tombs are still seen. It is on an eminence along the turnpike, and consists of a cleared field where a number of weather-worn tomb stones are clustered; most of them have fallen down. Among the inscriptions which could be deciphered, such names as John Cocker, died 1717; John Corsey, died 1736; besides other names, probably called after former owners and neighbors.

Only one large tree remains. The cherry trees planted by Discretion later are said to have been cut down not long since, and the stumps are yet visible.

The original slave quarters are standing and the stone cabins built by Henry Gater for his negroes in those colonial days are in a good state of preservation, and occupied now for farm buildings.

Many of his descendants recall anecdotes of the slave "Guinea Simon," who lived to a most advanced age. Mrs. Isaac Walker remembered him when she lived in Baltimore.

Every person of means in the province owned slaves in Gater's time, and the custom continued for many years later.

Gater's father-in-law, Mr. Johnson, mentions nine slaves by name in his will, which he distributed to his family, and Moses Walker, assistant of Discretion Gater, in his last testament says: "my negro woman Patty, who shall be retained as a slave by my said wife Discretion Walker during her (my said wife's) natural life and then to be manumitted and made free forever."

Isaac Walker, grandson of Henry Gater, of Baltimore, freed all his slaves as far back as 1830.

Henry Gater never abandoned the original site he selected for his home; and occupied it during his life. There is developed that character for perseverance and industry by which he became one of the landmarks of the region of his adoption.

Scharf, in his history of Baltimore, says: "In the Green Spring Valley, on the Green Spring branch of the Northern Central railway, nine miles from Baltimore, is Crooklandville. The latter hills here inclose the valley, and the scene is ideally picturesque."

CHAPTER II.

"In that mansion used to be
Free hearted hospitality;
His great fires by the chimney roared,
The stranger feasted at his board."
— Longfellow.

The first settlers who came from England brought with them their pre-inclination for lands, and their customs of acquiring, transferring, and retaining possession of same, which had been handed down for generations. Their ancient English laws and usages were transplanted to the new world, and engrafted upon the colonists.

The landed estates of Maryland are among the oldest in this country, and the deeds and grants perpetuating the title to them are complete and well preserved. Unlike many other states, neither the colonial, revolutionary nor civil wars have so devastated her territory as to cause the destruction of public buildings and official papers.

Like all new comers, Henry Sater, after he had become a planter, turned his attention to pre-empting public lands; but his original no-testament he is reported to have secured by purchase. Fadley papers state: "On his first settling upon Sater's Ridge, in Baltimore Co., the land records of this County show a transfer of a great number of pieces and parcels of land."

The earliest reference to him, among the files of the Land Office of the Province, is within six or seven years of his colonization, when he obtained his first tract of land from Lord Baltimore, there being due via January 7th, 1716, by virtue of a warrant, fifty (50) acres of land on the north side of Jones Mills, a branch of the Patapsco river, lying in Baltimore County.

This plot was called "White Hall," and "commences at a bounded white oak standing by a small draft of the aforesaid Mills, and on the last side of a tract of Land taken up by Thomas Carpenter." (See appendix.)

These mills are named after David Jones, the earliest settler who took up lands June 13th, 1681, on the north shore. This stream now constitutes one of the main sources of the water supply of Baltimore.

There is a small village called "White Hall" on the Northern Central Railway, twenty-two miles north of the city — one of the principal dairy stations on the line — which probably derives its name from this old patent.

On the first of October, 1718, the patent for the White Hall tract was granted to Henry Sater by Lord Baltimore (Charles the Second), upon such terms and conditions as are expressed in a proclamation of the Lord Proprietary (Charles the First), dated 5th of April, 1664. The proclamation was as follows:

" A P- - C-h-a-n-n-e-l-0-8 "

MARYLAND, ss.:

We having for divers good causes and considerations, as thereto moving, fully resolved and determined to alter our conditions of plantation of this our province, and communicated to our council such resolutions. We have thought fitt (by and with their advice and consent) by this our proclamation to publish and make known the same in manner following. (viz.): That all persons, adventurers or others of British or Irish descent, inhabiting, residing or trading into this province, desirous to take up any quantity or quantitys of land within this our province, shall pay or secure to be paid unto us or our heirs or such officer of officers as shall be appointed by us and our heires from time to time to collect and receive the same, the just quantity of one hundred and twenty pounds of tobacco in cask for the last purchase, together with two shillings sterlins yearly rent for every fifty acres of land he or they shall have choice of and take up as aforesaid in any part of this our province except on the sea-board side and Delaware bay and river to the fourtieth degree of northern latitude, which for encouragement of such person or persons as shall desire and undertake to settle the same, we will, shall and may be taken up by any person or persons of the descent aforesaid in any quantity not exceeding the number of five hundred acres in one tract to any one person, he or they paying or securing to be paid therefore unto us and our heirs or such officer or officers as aforesaid after the rate of sixpence pounds of tobacco in case for the first purchase, together with one shilling sterlins yearly rent for every fifty acres, etc., etc.'

All payments and fees connected with these land grants were made in tobacco.

For examining and signing every certificate of one hundred and fifty acres of land, thirty pounds of tobacco were paid, and for every hundred acres after the first, ten pounds up to three hundred acres, and for a greater quantity of land five hundred pounds of tobacco.

Among the recitals of Peter's patent is the following quaint expression which has the flavor of the feudal ages:

"To be holden of us and our heirs as of our manor of Baltimore in free and common socage by fealty only for all manner of services."

According to Blackstone, these socage tenures were relics of Saxon freedom retained by those who had not forfeited them to the king or exchanged them for tenure by "knights" service, and were not crofted over by wills. the Conqueror assent the feudal establishments.

Conan Doyle says, "holding land by free and common socage has been explained as havin' no feudal superior and answerable to none less than the King."

Payments were to be made yearly "at the City of St. Maries, at the two most usual feasts in the year, viz.: the feast of the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary and St. Michael the Archangel by even and equal portion the rent of two shillings sterling in silver or gold."

The feast of St. Michael is the 29th of September or Michaelmas Day and is an occasion of festivity in the Churches of England and Rome. In England it is one of the winter days on which rents become due, and is observed like our Thanksgiving Day, with a dinner of goose instead of turkey.

"September, when by custom (right divine)
Geese are ordain'd to bleed at Michael's shrine."

The patent bears the signature of "our trusty and well beloved John Cart, Esq., our Governor and Keeper of our said Greater Seals," etc.

He was the royal Governor appointed by Queen Anne as Lord Baltimore's lieutenant, and whose commission was renewed by George the First upon his accession in 1714.

The next grant to later from Lord Baltimore was the 7th of March, 1723, for twelve hundred and fifty acres of land in Baltimore County, known as "Satyr's Addition," and located on the east side of a hill near a run descending into Jones Falls.

The following is a certified copy:

H-e-n-r-y S-a-t-y-r, h-i-s P-e-t-e-n-t, } - Charles: To All, etc.
"S-a-t-y-r's -d-d-i-t-i-o-n," 350 a-c-r-e-s; }
"now Ye, that for and in Consideration that Henry Satyr of Beltimore County in Our said Province of Maryland hath due unto him three hundred and fifty acres of land within Our said Province by Virtue of a warrant for that quantity granted him, the said Henry Satyr out of Our Land Office the fifth day of April seventeen hundred and seventeen appears in Our Land Office, and upon such Consideration and terms as are expressed in Our Conditions of plantation of Our said Province bearing Date the fifth day of April one thousand six hundred eighty-four, and remaining upon record in Our said Province, together with such Alterations as in the same are made by Our Conditions bearing Date the fourty day of December one thousand six hundred and ninety-six, together also with the alterations made by Our Instructions bearing Date at London the twelfth day of September seventeen hundred and twelve and registered in Our Land Office of Our said Province. We do therefore hereby grant unto him, the said Henry Satyr, all that tract or parcel of Land called Satyr's Addition, lying in the said County: beginning at two small bounded black Oaks and one small bounded Hickory standing on the east side of a hill near a brook descending into Jones's falls and running from the said oaks and Hickory East two hundred and thirty perches, thence North three and a half degrees West one hundred and eighty perches, thence North fifty-five perches, thence North Eighty-two degrees West two hundred and Twenty-three perches, thence by a straight line to the said bounds. Therein are now laid out for three hundred and fifty acres of land more or less according to the Certificate of Survey, thereof taken and returned into our Land Office, bearing date the thirtieth September one thousand Seven hundred and Eighteen, and there remaining, together with all Rights, Profits, Benefits and Privileges thereto belonging. (Royal Wines excepted) to have and to hold the same unto him the said Henry Patyr his heirs and assigns for ever, to be holder of us and our heirs at our Honour of Baltimore in free and Common Socage by fealty only for all manner of services Yielding and paying therefore yearly unto us and our heirs at our receipt at the City of St. Mary's at the two most usual Feasts in the year, viz.: The feast of the Annunciation of the blessed Virgin Mary and Saint Michael the Archangel by even and Equal portions the Rent of fourteen shillings Sterling in Silver or Gold, and for a fine upon every alienation of the said land or any part or parcel thereof the whole year's Rent in Silver or Gold or the full value thereof in such commodity as we and our heirs or such officer or officers as shall be appointed by us and our heirs from time to time to collect and receive the same, shall accept in discharge thereof at the choice of us and our heirs or such officer or officers aforesaid, provided that if the said sum for a fine for alienation shall not be paid to us and our heirs or such officer or officers aforesaid before such alienation and the said alienation entered upon record either in the provost Court or County Court where the same parcel of land lieth within thirty days next after such alienation, then the said alienation shall be void and of no effect. Given under our greater Seal at Annapolis this twentieth day of May seventeen-hundred and twenty-three. Witness our trusty and wellbeloved Richard Price Esq., Chancellor and keeper of our said greater seal of our said province of Maryland.

I hereby certify, that the foregoing is a true copy of the Patent of "Patyr's Addition," as recorded in Liber P.L.O.B. folio 208, one of the Record Books of this office.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the Seal of the Land Office of Maryland, this 13th day of July, eighteen hundred and ninety-four.

HILL D. LEE, Commissioner of the Land Office.

This property, from its name, was probably adjoining his original tract which he acquired by purchase or colonization, and here he dwelt dwelling. It was the plantation spoken of by historians, where he was wont to entertain travelers with great hospitality, especially itinerant Baptists on their journeys through this region.

These colonists were said to be most lavish in their hospitality, and it was not unusual for them to throw open their houses and extend a welcome to all guests, even strangers whom they had not met before—

"Planter's tables, you must know are free to all that come and go."

The Baltimore court roll shows that "one acre, part of 'Satyr's addition' 300 acres (which was patented to Henry Sater, 7th of May, 1743, was transferred by Henry Sater to Henry Loveall, 16th Nov., 1745," for a church site, and the following is the deed of sale:

Henry Sater	}	—
to
Henry Loveall and others.
CONVEYANCE

This indenture made this sixteenth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and forty two, between Henry Sater in the Province of Maryland and County of Baltimore, planter, on the one part, and Henry Loveall, Thomas West, William Johnson and William Browne in the Province and County aforesaid, -i-t-a-s-s-e-t-h, that the said Henry Sater, for and in consideration of two millers sterlins to him in hand paid by the said Henry Loveall, Thomas West, William Johnson and William Browne aforesaid, the receipt whereof he the said Henry Sater doth hereby acknowledge that he is therewith fully satisfied, contented and paid, and thereof and from all and every part and parcel thereof set by these presents account and forever discharge the said Henry Loveall, Thomas West, William Johnson and William Browne and their heirs, executors and administrators, their and every of them forever, hath given, granted, bargained, sold, sett over, delivered and forever conformed and by these presents do give, grant, bargain, sett over and deliver and forever conform unto the above said Henry Loveall as Master, and Thomas West, William Johnson and William Browne as Deacons and Elders to the Church Congregation or People of God, commonly called General Baptists and to their Successors as such forever, as chosen by the Church of Congregation as above said to the end of the world and out of land situate and lying in or on his dwelling plantation, otherwise called Sater's addition.

Balt. County Court.

In testimony whereof, that the aforesaid, is a true copy taken from Liber P.D.L.C.O. folio 236, etc., one of the Land Records of Balt. County, which records are now in my keeping.

I do hereby subscribe my name and affix the seal of the Superior Court of Balt. City, this first day of June, A. D., 1865.
Alfred Pace, Clerk.

On the 20th of May, the following year the grant of "Sator's addition," he received another patent of one hundred acres of land, being part of a tract of three hundred and fifty (350) acres which was given him by virtue of a warrant granted the 2nd day of September, 1712, and described as

"all that tract or parcel of land called Dale's Discovery, lying and being in Baltimore County aforesaid on the North West Branch of Herring Run descending into Sack River. Beginning at a bounded white Oak, a bounded red Oak and a bounded Spanish Oak standing on a hill at the orth. of the said branch, and by a road called Richard Taylor's Travelling Road," etc.

This document is likewise signed by Richard Williamson, S., Chancellor and Keeper of the Great Seal, etc.

Among Gater's later grants from the Lord Proprietary was one for two hundred and seventy-seven (277) acres in Baltimore County, known as "Chevy Chase," by virtue of an assentment of a warrant from George Brown for the quantity of two hundred acres, granted the said George Brown the eightieth day of July, seventeen hundred and twenty-eight, and the remainder seventy seven acres by virtue of an assentment of a warrant for that quantity from Richard Gillaway of Anne Arundel County."

It is described as containing at "two colored white trees standing in the first line of a tract of land called Williamson's Manor," and is dated June 10th, 1731, and has the signature of Samuel Price, "Lieut. General and Chief Governor of our said Province of Maryland. Chancellor, etc."

There is no clue to the name of this patent, as it is so unlike the others, except that it was a popular title of the period. Edward G. Leeston, in an article on the "Colonists at home," says:

"One is not surprised to learn that by such firesides, 'Chevy Chase' and other ancient ballads of blood and sin-gater were sung. Stories of more recent encounters with the Indians must have chimed well with old English folk songs."

This patent must have been so named by Gater by the purchase of warrants of others, as also another grant of fifty (50) acres called "Crypt."

According to the Rent Roll of Baltimore County filed at Annapolis, Md., he possessed in 1803, "Gater's Addition," surveyed 3 in Oct., 1718, and also "Crypt," which had been patented by Henry Dwyer Dec. 31, 1743.

We learn from the records of the Land Office of Maryland, that Gater's eldest son George received the 20th of September, 1763 (after his father's decease), a tract called "Crypt Inheritance" comprising eighty-two (82) acres, which was a resurvey of the original Crypt patent.

Dr. Geo. W. Archer, of the Farford Co. Historical Society, and an eminent genealogist of Maryland, writes that in Sheriff Hall's assessment roll of Baltimore County, "Henry Gater" (another son) "is assessed 1763 for White Hall, 35 acres; Gater's Addition, 356 acres; Crypt 30 acres; and Chevy Chase, 77 acres."

The Kent Roll also states "that 'Hole's Discovery,' one hundred acres (which was patented to Henry later 26th May, 1729), was in the possession of Sarah Borine and that a transfer of said tract from said Sarah was made to William Askew 3d of May, 1731, also same tract by William Askew to Alexander Stewart, 6th Oct., 1761."

From this it would appear that later had disposed of part of this original patent.

The dates of entry of his several warrants and his grants in Baltimore County, as surveyed and filed in the land office are as follows:

Date	Acres	Surveyed	Warrant	Patent
White Hall	50	16 Jan. 1716	7 June, 1716	21 October, 1718

"The men who settled the Southern Colonies - Virginia, Maryland and the Carolinas, were Cavaliers" says Miss Goodwin, the authoress of a recent work on Southern life before the revolution, "not necessarily in blood, or even loyal to the Stuart cause, but cavalier in sympathies, in the general view of life, in virtue and vices. So far as the provinces could represent the mother country, Virginia and Maryland reflected the Cavaliers, as Massachusetts and Connecticut reflected the Puritans."

It was to the colonial cavalier type Henry later belonged, whose ideal was a large landed estate.

Commencing with the little "White Hall" plot of only fifty acres, for which he obtained a patent when thirty-six years old, his borders were gradually enlarged until he became the owner of a manor of over one thousand acres with the usual dwellings and necessary improvements.

This is confirmed by traditions in his family as it has always been understood among later's descendants that his plantation was over a thousand acres of land.

The writer's mother, who lived in Baltimore when a young girl, and was familiar with many incidents of her great grandfather later's history, said that he came from England with one of the Baltimores, had a manor with a large reservation, including a deer park, - that he was very wealthy, and entertained in a very hospitable manner.

his success as a planter is shown from the fact that from 1716 to 1746, a period of only twelve years, he had cultivated over a thousand acres of land besides what he might have acquired by purchase.

By the time he had taken out his next to last claim, (14th August, 1738) he had reached the age of thirty-eight.

Note:- Joseph Peter (Peter's youngest son), appointed guardian of Charles Peter, orphan son of George Peter, late of Baltimore Co. (Baltimore Co. Orphan's Court, June Term, 1772). The guardian's account, recorded Decem. 1, 1767, mentions lands "Ag't charged," "Addition to White Hill," and "Peter's addition."

CHAPTER III.

"Laws mild, impartial, tolerant and fixed
a bond of union for the people mixed;
Such as good Calvert framed for Baltimore."
— Barroughs.

Within the borders of the Maryland province religious toleration was the watchword which was the guide and rule of action, and protection to all sects was not only secured by liberal statutes but strictly enforced by the Courts.

The Baptists had early promulgated the doctrine of religious liberty, and freedom from all state or government interference in ecclesiastical affairs.

It was natural therefore that their denomination should take root and thrive in a colony where toleration was the prevailing sentiment, and where laws were enacted to repress all fears of sects and allay any antagonisms arising from differences of creeds and beliefs.

Under these circumstances the rise and growth of the Maryland Baptists was rapid and free from all those bitter persecutions which had engendered so much feeling among the Puritans.

All Baptist historians, as well as other authorities, agree in ascribing to Henry Sater the credit of organizing the parent society of that denomination in the Province of Maryland.

Benedict's history of the Baptists contains the following account of the origin of the Chestnut Street Church.—

"This body was formed in 1742, and Henry Sater, a layman, is represented as its founder. He was a General Baptist, and removed thither from England in 1709. Soon after his settlement in this colony, which was in its northern parts, he invited Baptist ministers to preach in his house, by which means a few, from time to time, were proselyted to his sentiments, and after many years a church was gathered in his neighborhood."

"Among the ministers who officiated with this infant community as pastors or auxiliaries, in early times, were George Mylesfield from Pa.; Paul Palmer, whose name will appear among the Baptists in U. S.; Henry Loveall, and probably others."

"The covenant entered into by this people, and which was presented to the Governor and Court of this then Catholic Province, when the society was taken under the protection of the toleration laws, was expressed in the following terms:"

"We, the humble professors of the Gospel of Christ, baptized upon a declaration of faith and repentance, believing the doctrine of general redemption (or the free grace of God extended to all mankind), do heresy seriously, heartily, and solemnly, in the presence of the Searcher of all hearts, and before the world, covenant, agree, bind, and settle ourselves into a church, to holie, abide by, and contend for the faith once delivered to the saints, owned by the best reformed churches in England, Scotland and elsewhere, especially as published and maintained in the forms and confessors of the baptists in England and Scotland, except in infant baptism, modes of church government, the doctrine of absolute reprobation, and some ceremonies. We do also bind ourselves hereunto to defend and live up to the protestant religion. We do also engage with our lives and fortunes, to defend the crown and dignity of our gracious sovereign King George, to him and his issue forever; and to obey all his laws, humbly submitting ourselves to all in authority under him, and giving custom to whom custom, honor to whom honor, tribute to whom tribute is due. We do further declare that we are not against taking oaths, nor using arms in defence of our king and country when regularly called thereto; and that we approve and will obey the laws of this province. And further, we find ourselves to follow the patterns of our brethren in England, to maintain order, government, and discipline in our church, especially that excellent directory of Rev. Francis Stanier, entitled, 'The Gospel Honor and Church Ornament,' dedicated to the churches in the counties of Lincoln, Nottingham and Cambridge. We also entreat that all persons upon joining our society shall yield consent to and subscribe this our solemn league and covenant. Subscribed by us whose names are underwritten, this 10th day of July, 1742."

"Mr. Bator bore an excellent character, and may be considered not only the founder of this society, but of the baptist interest in Maryland. His assistance in building the place of worship and his gifts of land to the minister are mentioned as peculiar marks of his liberality."

Scharf pays the same glowing tribute to him:

"Although not a minister, he was an active and zealous baptist Christian, and so respected by his neighbors and by the civil authorities that there is no evidence of any interference on account of his belief or worship. He was pious, liberal, loved and long remembered. In those days most of the baptist ministers were accustomed to travel and preach as invited or permitted, sometimes sending appointments in advance, and sometimes using providential opportunities on the spot such ministers Henry later was wont to entertain and to ask them to preach at his house."

Weissampel's "History of Baptist Churches in Maryland" describes the organization of the church and says:

"He was frequently called upon to entertain strangers. Among the travelers from Eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia there was found occasionally a Baptist minister, and such Mr. Sater always invited to his 'plantation' to preach at his dwelling. Encouraged by the number who attended services, he at length determined to provide a more suitable place of worship, and erected a meeting-house on his own land at his own expense."

Among the middle and southern colonies, where the residences of the settlers were widely scattered, religious exercises were not infrequently held in groves, and in bad weather, private dwellings and barns were used.

Sater's Family History continues: "The barn has been removed; before the meeting house was built, that was used for a place of worship. The religious of all denominations were invited." "Previous to building a meeting-house, Henry and Dorcas Sater convey the lot in 1742 to Henry Lovehill and others in trust for the use of the General Baptist Church and congregation. Dorcas (daughter of Mr. Lowson) laid the corner brick in the foundation of the house."

This place of worship was built upon "Sater's addition," the 350 acres patent from the Lord Proprietor the 7th of Jan., 1723, and is two miles distant from Brooklandville Station, on the Green Spring branch of the Northern Central Railway.

It is on an elevated plateau, running along for some distance, and known as Chestnut Ridge, and near another ridge called Sater's. The view is commanding, and the surrounding country very attractive.

The church is approached by a very old road known as 'church land,' lined with extremely tall trees, very close together, and forming a hedge on either side. This lane is a straight road from the "falls turnpike" to the church entrance, with a cleared field on one side and on the other an ancient forest abounding in hickory, oak and chestnut trees, being first growth of timber.

The meeting-house, a one story and brick structure, with white trimmings, shingle roof, and two outside chimneys built up from the ground, is substantially the same as when first erected, excepting those alterations mentioned hereinafter.

Like the mansions of the wealthiest planters of the colony, it was of brick, the old portion of which was made from English brick, (according to tradition imported by Henry Sater). The windows placed on each side of the building and at the gable ends consisted of the small panes of glass of that period which were also said to have been sent from abroad by the founder. They have since been replaced by large sized glass and modern window sashes.

Originally the church opened directly outside with only a single pair of doors. When the last changes were made, a vestibule eight feet two inches long and thirteen feet four inches in width was added, with extra doors, one side of this addition being filled up with book shelves for the library.

The present dimensions of the building are:

Length of main building,	-	41 feet.
Width " " "	-	30 "
Height " " "	-	15 "

It contains 21 pews, with aisles at each end.

Few members of the church and congregation are left in this neighborhood, except the sexton, Miss Laura Cockey, who lives with her mother near the church, and has the custody of the keys and general care of the property.

Mr. W. F. Foster, a deacon of over forty years connection with its history, and his son, Mr. Edward A. Foster, Superintendent of the Sunday School, reside at Sherwood, about four miles distant.

Regarding the history of Gaters, Deacon Foster writes:

"The existence of this church is prior to the date of the deed, and they used his (Foster's) house for meetings before the church house was built. The largest number of membership was about 160, but for many years, owing to the sparse population, the number has been below 50. The population is beginning to thicken up some little and we hope for better things in the future.

"You ask for church records. There is nothing of its history except as I have stated what is to be found in Benedict's Church History. Tradition is largely drawn upon for most of the so-called history. The archives or church records were said to be burned in the house of the clerk. This is the first of the baptist churches in this state, and is held in high esteem by our baptist brethren far and near. Of course the organization is not continuous from 1742 to the present time, but in all probability has been reorganized more than once."

Aside from the many associations with which this mother church of the large denomination in Maryland is invested, it is doubly interesting from the fact of its survival through the ravages of the French and Indian wars, the hostilities of an India audience struggle, the conflicts of 1812 and the civil war, and that it has outlived so many generations of its worshippers.

Carlyle recalls one of these old meeting-houses which he used to attend as a boy in the following touching language:

"Poor temple of my childhood," he wrote sixty years after, "to me more sacred at this moment than perhaps the biggest cathedral extant would have been; rude, rustic, bare, no temple in the world was more so, but there were sacred incencies, tongues of authentic flame from heaven which kindled what was best in me, what had not yet gone out."

Around the church are some gigantic oaks that must be at least two hundred years old, besides great chestnuts and evergreens. This corresponds with the record of Prudence Sater's family, describing the building as, "in the heart of a magnificent grove of oak trees, there being no more beautiful spot upon his great plantation."

This site includes one acre of land used as a church-yard, containing the last resting place of many of the original settlers and their descendants.

The use of a single acre plot for this purpose is of very early origin, Longfellow says:

"I like that ancient Saxon phrase, which calls
The burial ground God's acre; it is just;
It consecrates each grave within its walls
And breathes a benison o'er the sleeping dust."

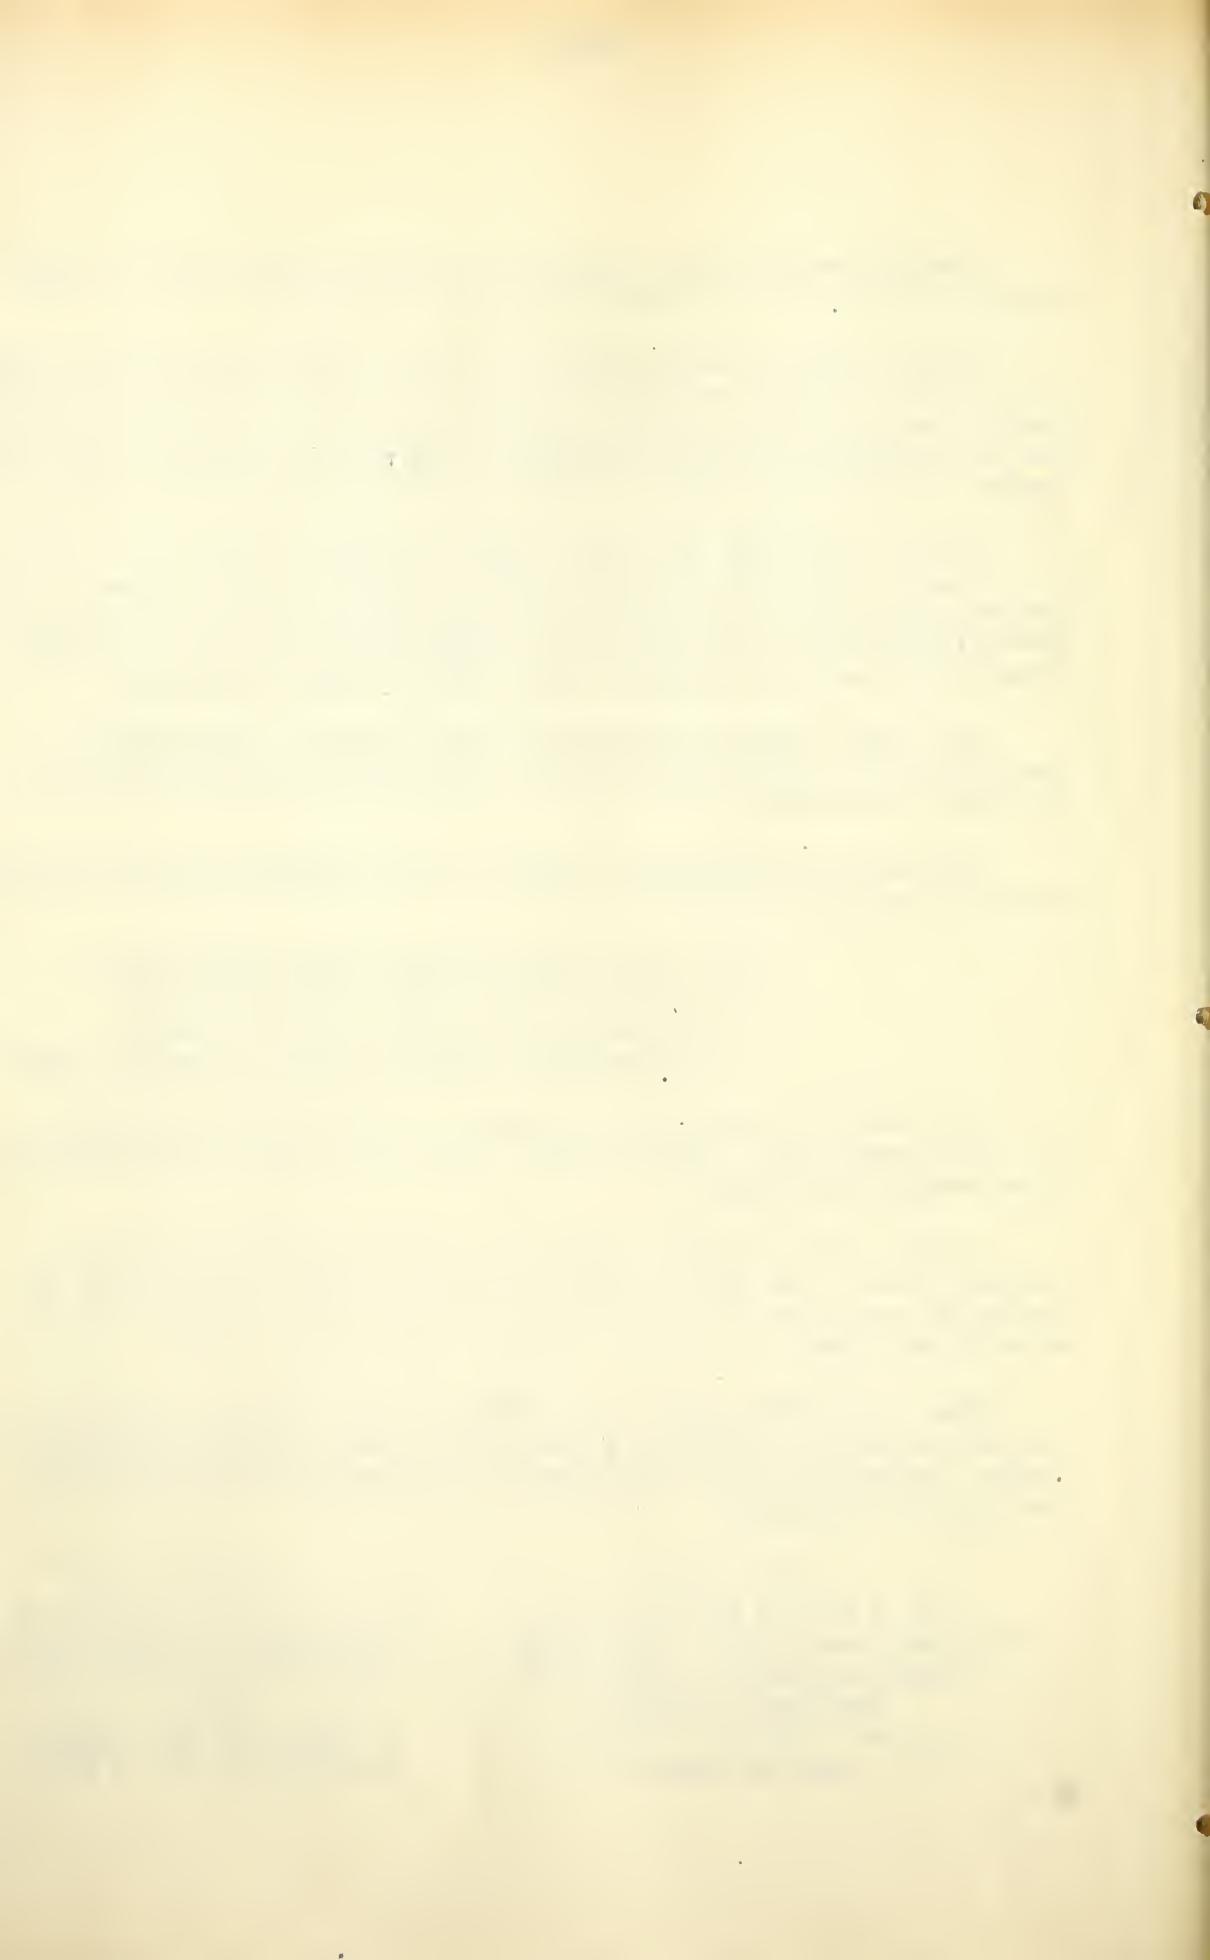

The cemetery surrounds the church on all sides and contains many old tomb stones, some of which are so worn that the inscriptions have become obliterated.

Among a row of graves nearest the meeting-house and towards 'church lane,' (and on the right of the entrance as one enters the building) are to be found the Jaters, Walkers and Fowsons, side by side in one line.

Near the church doors the remains of Henry Sater's daughter Discretion and her husband, Thomas Walker, are marked by two marble stones, (erected by their descendants, the Leverings of Baltimore), bearing the following:

Sacred
to the memory of
D-i-s-c-r-e-t-i-o-n W-a-l-k-e-r,
Relict of Thomas Walker, who Departed this life
Dec. 7th, 1823,
Aged 76 years.

Sacred
to the memory of
T-h-o-m-a-s W-a-l-k-e-r,
who was born Sept. 1742
and
Died 18th Oct., 1818
Aged 76 years and 1 month.

alongside of these is a slab marked:

A-n-n, W i f e o f
Phil 'owson, Died June 5th, 1800.
Aged 35 years, 10 months and 6 days.

This was probably the wife of Milemon Fowson, a brother of Gen. Nathan Fowson, U. S. Army, and grandson of William Fowson, one of the trustees of the church. The Baltimore directory for 1827 contains the name of Milemon Fowson, (Liberty, near Baltimore Streets).

In the same row, near the former grave, is a stone marking the last resting place of Henry, (second) son of Henry Sater, with the record:

H-e-n-r-y S-a-t-e-r
Died March 8th, 1786, in the 44th year of his age.

This son was born 27th of April, 1743, and married Hannah, daughter of John Stanbury of Baltimore County, Maryland.

The next grave is that of Henry Sater's Grandson, and fourth son of Henry (second) and Hannah (Stanbury) Sater, and is inscribed:

G-e-o-r-g-e S-a-t-e-r
Died September 15th, 1796
Age a 26 years.

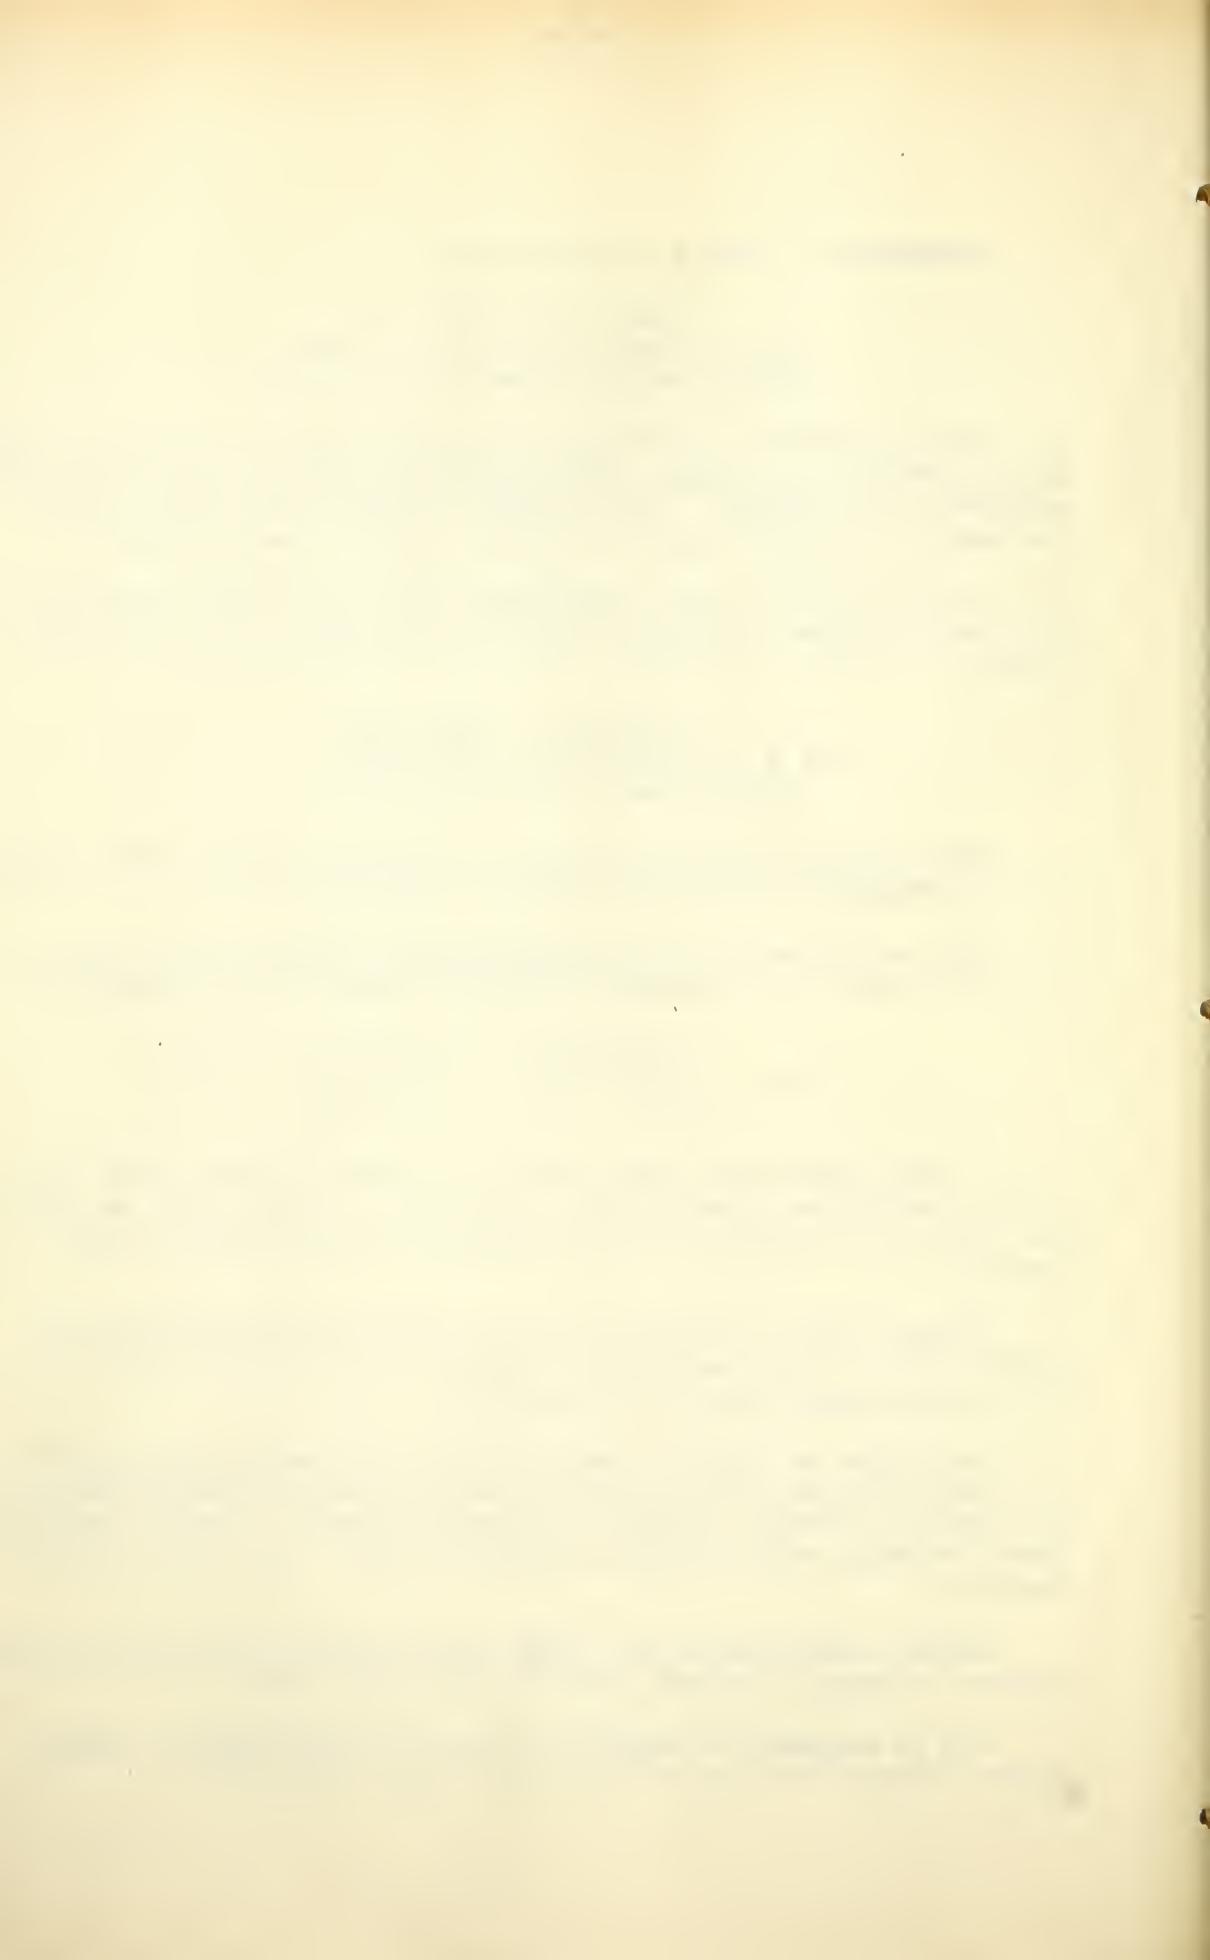

A most ancient slab near one of the church windows bears the simple inscription, Henry Sater; but there is nothing left to indicate for which of the Saters it was intended, the name scarcely being legible.

Besides these, there are many weather worn stones which were placed there to mark the burial places of others of the family, but have since crumbled away or fallen down.

One stone records the death of Capt. John Cockey, who departed this life Feb. 5th, 1800. He was generally known as "Gentleman John," and married Ereckah, daughter of Joseph Cromwell; another daughter, Sarah Cromwell, was the wife of Izaekiel Fowson, (Mrs. Henry Sater's brother).

Among other names of old inhabitants recorded here are those of Borsuck, Berryman, Correll, Furness, Hider and Jones.

One is reminded of Washington Irvin's description of Sleepy Hollow Cemetery in passing through the Sater churchyard:

"Long rows of grave stones, side by side, of similar sizes, but various dates, showed that generation after generation of the same families had followed each other and been gathered together in this last gathering place of kindred."

One of the restrictions made by Sater in his deed of the property was that the burial grounds, etc., were to be "forever free," which provision has continued in force until the present time. No burial plot has ever been sold in this cemetery. Mr. George Brown, the owner of the surrounding land, has since donated two additional acres to the church, which will permit the sale of lots hereafter from the new addition.

A resident of Brocklansville, Ia., wrote in 1895: "The foundation of the barn of the Sater homestead was torn away last spring (1894) by Mr. J. W. Merriman, present owner of the original Sater Homestead."

CHAPTER IV.

"They are all passing from the land
Those churches old and gray
In which our fathers used to stand
In years gone by and pray."
— Elizabeth Lakes Smith.

The little old-fashioned meeting-house, nestling among the Brooklandville hills on the outskirts of Baltimore is one of those stepping stones which connect us with the earliest colonial times.

A trifle more than a century before the birth of this church, the first baptist movement in this country was inaugurated at Providence, Rhode Island, when Ezekiel Holman baptized Roger Williams, and this famous clergyman in turn baptized Holman and ten others, (March, 1639).

Next to the Episcopalians and Congregationalists, the baptists are the oldest of the Protestant organizations of America, and the earliest baptist community in Massachusetts is the first church of Swansea, and next in age to the Providence church.

Although the Swansea society dates from 1664, it was organized as early as 1643 by the noted Ebenezer Holmes and others.

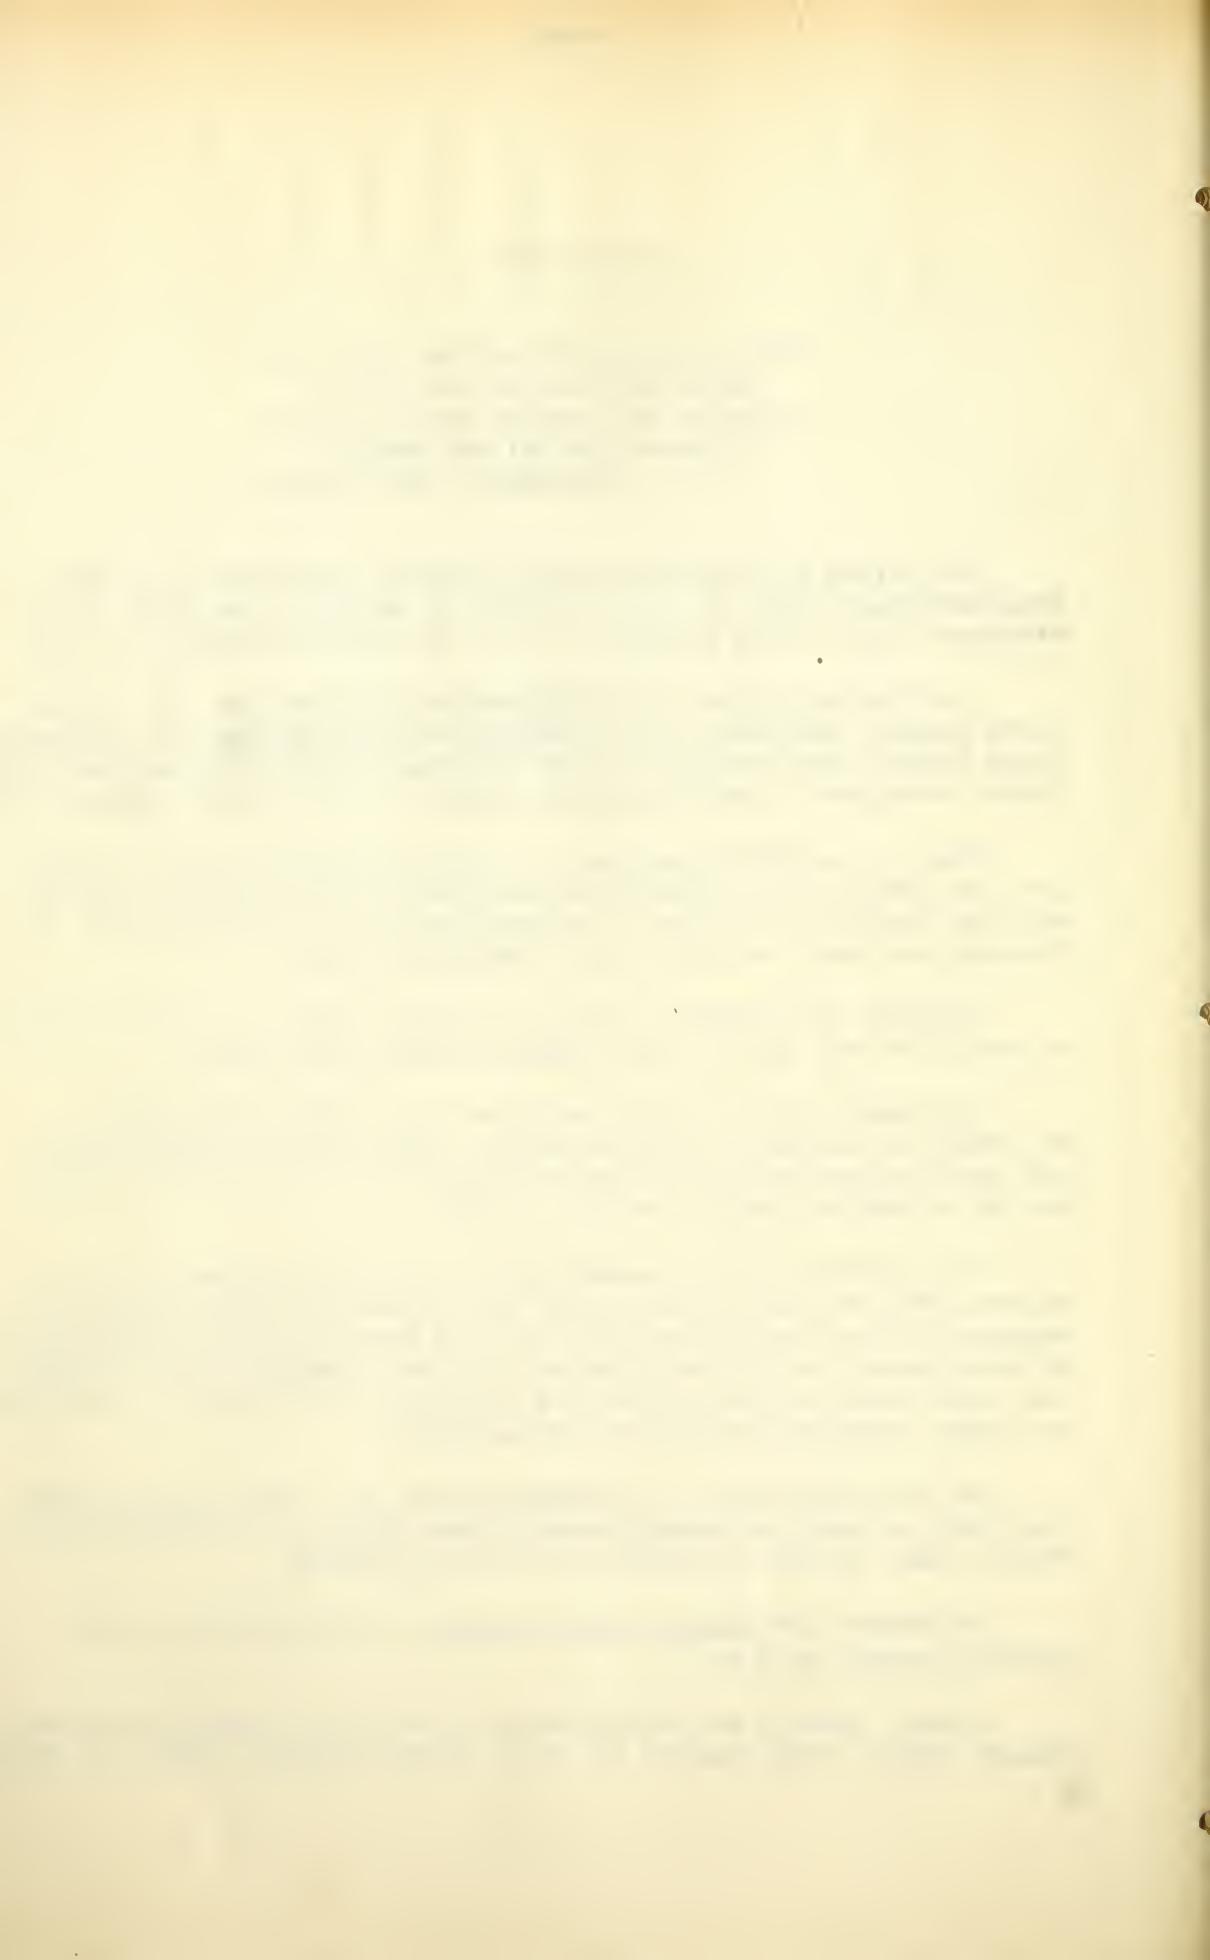

Two Rhode Island baptist churches — the first and second — of Newport, come next in chronological order, dating back to 1644 and 1656 respectively, and they were followed by the first baptist church of Boston, Mass., May 26th, 1665.

"In later's church," according to a circular issued from the church, "we have the beginnings of the Baptist interest in Maryland. Because of the immense territory of time covered by the experiences of this church, a full satisfactory history thereof is not intended. The facts here secured are but the outposts that indicate the boundary of time's territory covered by her history."

To fully appreciate the circumstances, and understand the surroundings of this anti-revolutionary landmark, it is necessary to recall other places of worship of the same period.

The second (or Baldwin Place) baptist Church of Boston was contemporaneous with it.

"Public worship was continued in James Bowditch's dwelling house, Sheafe Street, from October 31, 1744, until June 23d, 1745, and then," says the clerk in his journal, "we removed the meeting to my school house, and there held our public worship until Lord's day, March 15th, 1740, when we met in our new meeting-house for the first time."

The Rev. Baron Stowe, in his centennial discourse in this church a century later, remarks that "at this period (1740) the baptist denomination on this continent was exceedingly limited, numbering only thirty-seven churches and probably less than three thousand members."

The renowned South Church of Boston, corner of Milk and Washington Sts., one of the best known landmarks of New England, was, only twelve years earlier, built in 1730 upon the site of a church dating back to 1669.

Among contemporaneous buildings erected the same year as Sater's, we recall Faneuil Hall, Boston, (alluded to in the preface); the old Lutheran meeting-house of Philadelphia and the baptist church of Hingwood, N. J.

Sater's church grew so rapidly that within four years its membership had increased to 181, and during the founder's lifetime was very flourishing, and gave rise to numerous other churches, spreading to different colonies.

The first company of baptists in Virginia were emigrants from England, who organized a church in 1714, opposite Jamestown, on the south side of the river, Isle of Wight County, and afterwards another at Brandon in Surrey County.

"While this movement was in progress in the southern part of Virginia," says Armitage in his history of the Baptists, "the influence of the Welsh baptists in Pennsylvania and Delaware began to be felt in Berkeley, Loudon and Rockingham Counties, which were visited by their ministers. People think that these laborers first reached the colony through Edward Days and Thomas Yates, members of the Sater's Baptist Church in Maryland, and that Revs. Loveall, Beaton and Barrard soon followed them."

This branch church was at Speckon Creek, Berkeley County, Va., near the site of Martinsburg, and was subsequently known as Mill Creek Church.

The origin of the second company of baptists in the Virginia colony is given by Benedict in his history of the Baptists, as viz.:

"In the year 1743, a number of the members of the General Baptist Church at Chestnut Ridge, in Maryland, removed to Virginia and settled in this place, the most noted of whom were Edward Days and Thomas Yates. Soon after their removal, their minister, Henry Loveland, followed them and baptized about fifteen persons, whom he formed into a church on the Armenian plan."

"The country in which they had settled was but thinly inhabited, and was subject to incursions of the Indians."

"None of these savage irruptions took place not long after Mr. Garrard had settled upon them; in consequence of which he and many of the church removed beyond the Blue Ridge, and resided for some time in Loudon County on Ketockton Creek."

Here another church was organized with Mr. Garrard as pastor.

In addition to the spread of the denominations from Sater's to Speckon and Ketockton, Virginia, and others to North Carolina, it is stated that Winter Hill, the First Baltimore, Janey Town, and Danpowder Creek churches in Maryland originated from it.

"The second baptist church formed in Maryland sprang from this; in 1747, or five years after Chestnut Ridge was constituted, some of the members invited 'particular Baptists' to preach among them, as their church was pastorless and supplies were only occasional. Fourteen of these Chestnut Ridge members became 'particular Baptists.' Of these, in 1754, a church was organized at Winter Hill, which was afterwards called Marford or Dartford, by Benjamin Griffith and Peter Cutterson Van Horn, ministers from the Philadelphia Baptist Association. This Marford Church, 'constituted in Baltimore County, Maryland,' was received into the Philadelphia Association, Oct. 7th, 1755, under the name Baltimore, and bears that name in the minutes until 1774. The church grew rapidly, absorbing the Chestnut Ridge church, and was for a long time regarded as one of the principal churches of the country. In 1771 it had four meeting places. Besides the main church at Winter Hill, one branch met in the house at Chestnut Ridge, belonging to the General Baptists, another at Potesoco, and a third near Winchester."

"During the war of the Revolution," says the Rev. D. F. Davis, "the numbers were very much scattered and the church became extinct. After the country was blessed with peace the scattered fragments were gathered by the ministry of the venerable John Davis and were reorganized under the name 'Sater's.' Elders Absalom Butler and George Grice, both of them good men and true, afterward ministered to this church."

"The original meeting-house built by Mr. Sater became too small and was enlarged early in the present century (by the addition of about fourteen feet). To celebrate the re-dedication of the house after its enlargement, a 'June Meeting' was established. From that time to the present, this meeting has been irregularly maintained on the second Sunday in June. Scores of people come from the surrounding country and from the City of Baltimore to hear the word preached. Sometimes the crowd has been so large that they have been obliged to abandon the house and hold their services in the grove of primeval oaks surrounding the house."

"Mr. Grice continued to be their pastor till his death in 1826. His remains lie buried near the north-west corner of the meeting-house."

In June, 1895, the usual anniversary was held, and is thus described in a Maryland paper:

"Venerable Sater's Church.

"Sater's Baptist Church, on Chestnut Street, in the eighth district of Baltimore County, was crowded yesterday. The second Sunday in June is always an occasion of much interest there, and it is called the 'June Meeting' where people attend from many miles around the country.

The all-day meeting on the second Sunday of this month has been held at Sater's for over a century. By some the yearly gathering has been called the 'cherry meeting,' because cherries are ripe at that time.

"The church is one of the oldest in the State, having been built before the revolutionary war. Many persons who make their annual pilgrimages to the 'June meeting,' do so for the purpose of meeting old friends and relatives."

All-Day Meeting at Sater's

The annual all-day meeting at Sater's Baptist Church, on Chestnut Street, was held yesterday and was in charge of the pastor, Rev. Charles Adey. A Bible school was held at 10 A.M. There was preaching at 11 A.M. by Rev. John L. Fraser, and exercises were held by the Sunday School at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Sater's Church is one of the oldest in the State.

— Baltimore Sun, June 13th, 1895.

After the decease of Mr. Grice, this church had no settled pastor, but was obliged to depend upon visiting clergymen from other churches, until about 1840, when this church had become nearly extinct.

At the commencement of its second century of existence in 1842, the church was incorporated by the Legislature of the State of Maryland, and among these incorporators were the Revs. Jater, Mrs. Walker and George F. Adams; the former a grandson of the founder.

and the latter, the author of an article on this church, as quoted above.

For a few years after this, there was no regular organization at Carter's; but sometimes the Rev. Joseph Sette and Rev. Daniel Cushing filled the pulpit.

Among other clergymen who subsequently visited and officiated there were Revs. J. Wilson, J. A. McLean, S. F. Hill, Geo. T. Adams and Robert Miller.

In November, 1861, the Executive board of the Maryland Baptist Union Association appointed Rev. J. L. Lodge to the charge of this church.

The structure was almost ruined from neglect and exposure to the weather. Mr. Lodge soon gathered a Sunday school of nearly forty children, and in a short time quite a large congregation to regular preaching services.

At the time of his accession to the pastorate, there had been no material alterations of the interior since it was built. The same old-fashioned high pulpit with winding stairs existed, surmounted by the customary canopy, an octagonal sounding board.

"That sounding board, to me it seem'd
A cherub poised on high—
A mystery, I almost deemed Quite hid from vulgar eye."
—B. Oxen Smith.

The old organization having practically become extinct through the deaths and changes of residence of its members, it was reconstructed under the able ministry of Mr. Lodge, with a new board of trustees.

In September, 1862, the surviving members of the old board of trustees transferred the property to the new board, and the church revived, so that in November of the same year it received an accession of fifteen members by baptism. Mr. Lodge occupied the pulpit for four years, during which time there were considerable gains in membership.

"During Mr. Lodge's pastorate, the house was completely renovated. The old high pine glass pulpit, reached by a winding staircase, with an octagonal sounding board suspended from the ceiling over the preacher's head, gave place to a modern platform. A capola was erected, a bell procured, new seats furnished, doors and windows repaired, the whole painted, and a new substantial fence placed around the lot."

This ancient meeting-house is a well preserved structure with the air of antiquity, notwithstanding its renovations and improvements. It was built without steeple, cupola or bell, probably because dissenters were forbidden these things in England.

This letter explains the inscription upon the bell erected upon the baptist church at Providence, completed in May, 1775:

"For freedom of conscience the town was first planted,
Persuasion, not force was used by the people;
This church is the eldest and has not recanted,
Enjoying, and granting well, temple and steeple."

Another reason for the absence of the bell, in ye olden days, the worshippers, as was the ancient custom, were often assembled at the sound of the drum, and sometimes by the notes of a horn.

The baptist meeting-house in Reading, Mass., was in like manner enlarged in 1822 by an addition and a cupola and bell.

The town records of Newbury, Mass., however, show that the church bell was in early use there, Jan. 4th, 1705:

"Voted that the new bell be hanged in the turrett of the meetin'-house, with all convenient space. Also to take care that the bell be rung at nine of the clock every night and the day of the month be every night tolled."

After Dr. Lodge's resignation in 1867, the Rev. John A. Jones became pastor, and continues until 1871. Subsequently the pulpit was filled semi-monthly by Dr. Isaac Cole.

Rev. C. B. Gitts was its minister from 1876 to 1880, and was succeeded by Rev. J. D. D. Clerk, and Dr. C. D. Parker, who preached for short periods.

In 1885, the Rev. James A. Woolf assumed the pastorate, at which time this church was reported as being in a flourishing condition, self-supporting, and as having enlarged and repaired the building again.

The Revs. Mr. Dickey and Mr. Hibbard successively followed Mr. Woolf as pastors, and from June, 1892 to 1895, Mr. E. R. Robertson, of Calvary Church, Towson. Rev. Chas. May, of Lutherville, now fills the pulpit.

The following are the concluding remarks of an address issued by the church:

"If the trees, by whose arm the building has been shielded from sun and storm, could speak, or the sainted ones, whose mortal remains are confined in the bounds that seem to keep vigil around her walls, could reveal their respective links of knowledge in the chain of her history, how ponderous a volume would result! Many persons now living may tell of the material and visible strummings and rejoicings; but only eternity, interpreted by the Omnipotent One, can make known the moral, mental and spiritual worth and worth of the "Grand Mother Church" of the Baptists in Maryland."

CHAPTER V.

"Who are they but the men of toil
who cleave the forest down
An' plant, amid the wilderness
The market and the town."
— Stewart.

Among the chronicles of the lives of the early settlers who formed the vanguard of American civilization, the accounts of their marriages and family history are usually scarce and brief, and in the case of our colonists' Wellock, we are only furnished with an outline.

It was not until his forties year — that is about 1730 — that Henry Sater took a wife, Miss Stevenson, (probably the daughter of a neighbor) by whom he had no children.

Hadly sister, has not preserved the names of the parents of his first wife, other than Stevenson. As there is a station on the Green Spring Branch railway, only two miles distant, of the same name, it is presumed that his wife's family were the original settlers of the district after which it was called.

Cockeyville, Johnson, and adjoining places in this vicinity owe their names to the families who were founders.

All that tradition has handed down to us on this subject is that after some years of married life, she died and was buried in the south east corner of his garden, in front of his dwelling, in the direction of the meeting house afterward erected.

Regarding the site of the homestead, Mr. Foster, of Foster, Baltimore Co., Md., writes:

"As to the house Mr. Sater lived and died in, I have never seen; but the foundations of his dwelling house are there and doubtless the garden in which his first wife was buried; persons who pulled the old house down are living now and have told me it was known as the house Mr. Sater lived in."

There is still living in this neighborhood a very old man called Edward Burnham who remembers the home of Sater, and helped tear down the old building. In another letter Mr. Foster adds: "I could have aided you in locating Mr. Sater's dwelling; you no doubt noticed the grove of trees near the house which is nearest to the church, it was in this grove where tradition locates the dwelling, and it is covered by a rude hole some ten feet square and nearly covered up with old things."

Here the Saters lived, according to tradition, an ideal country life, in the midst of their prosperous plantation of one thousand acres of wood and bottom land, attended by the customary complement of slaves and dispensed to all comers the generous hospitality."

About ten years after his first marriage, Sater ventured upon matrimony again. Early in 1740, he married Dorcas, the daughter of William and Catherine (Allen) Louson, of Lewentown, Md.

From Sater's second marriage, he had four sons and two daughters, all born on his Chestnut Grove plantation.

The record of these births is contained in the family bible of the youngest son, Joseph, now in the possession of his (Joseph's) grandson, Mr. Ross. Noah Sater, of West Chester, Ohio. It reads as viz.:

Children of Henry Sater.

George Sater was born the 20th day of October in the year 1740, and departed this life in April, 1768, the son of Henry the Elder. Prudence Sater, daughter of Henry and Dorcas, was born Nov. 28th, 1743. Henry Sater, son of Henry and Dorcas, was born April 27th, 1745, and departed life.

Discretion Sater, daughter of Henry and Dorcas, was born April 3d, 1748. John Sater, son of Henry and Dorcas, was born April 1st, 1751. Joseph Sater, son of Henry and Dorcas, was born December 20th, 1753, (and departed this life October 27th, 1843.)

"The above are the first generation of Saters born in Baltimore County and State of Maryland, North America."

Henry Sater's family history contains the following reference to the Indians of the Province about this time:

"In 1740, this province raised three hundred men to go to join the other forces against the French and Indians from Canada. Maryland had suffered but little from the Indian wars. In 1677 Col. Kersey negotiated a peace with the Senecas and the rest of the five nations at Albany for Maryland and Virginia. To this confederation was added the Tuscarora in 1712, making six nations. There yet remained many Indians in this state. Often the inhabitants would have to take to the forts to protect themselves from their scouting parties and drive their stock towards the mountains, although there was a general cessation of hostilities from the treaty of peace concluded in 1720 by the council ordered by the General Court at Boston as far south as Virginia. It was supposed they could be again disposed to hostilities and had not been under the immediate influence of French interest."

"When this took place Henry Bater was in the enjoyment of a family and plantation on the ridge of land known as Bater's Ridge, ten miles north of Baltimore, engaged in the cultivation of tobacco."

"He held considerable bodies of land in possession, through what means he came by them I am not prepared to say, further than I never heard of any grants in his farm, nor have I any knowledge of his pecuniary means, but suppose his resources must have been considerable."

Mr. Alex. C. Caenoweth has informed the writer that he thought the patents which Henry Bater received from Lord Baltimore, "In free and common socage, etc.,," were rewards for military service.

Referring to the first settlers, in his Genealogy he says: "Each male member was constantly under arms ready for military service. The tenure of land by grants from the Lord Proprietor, Lord Baltimore, was drawn in recognition of this service. The exposure and hardships, encounters with savages, numerous and unrecorded in many cases, have left impressions of true patriotism worthy of con oration."

About the time of Braddock's defeat, the life of this colonist was drawing to its close; but the records give us but few facts which throw much light upon his end.

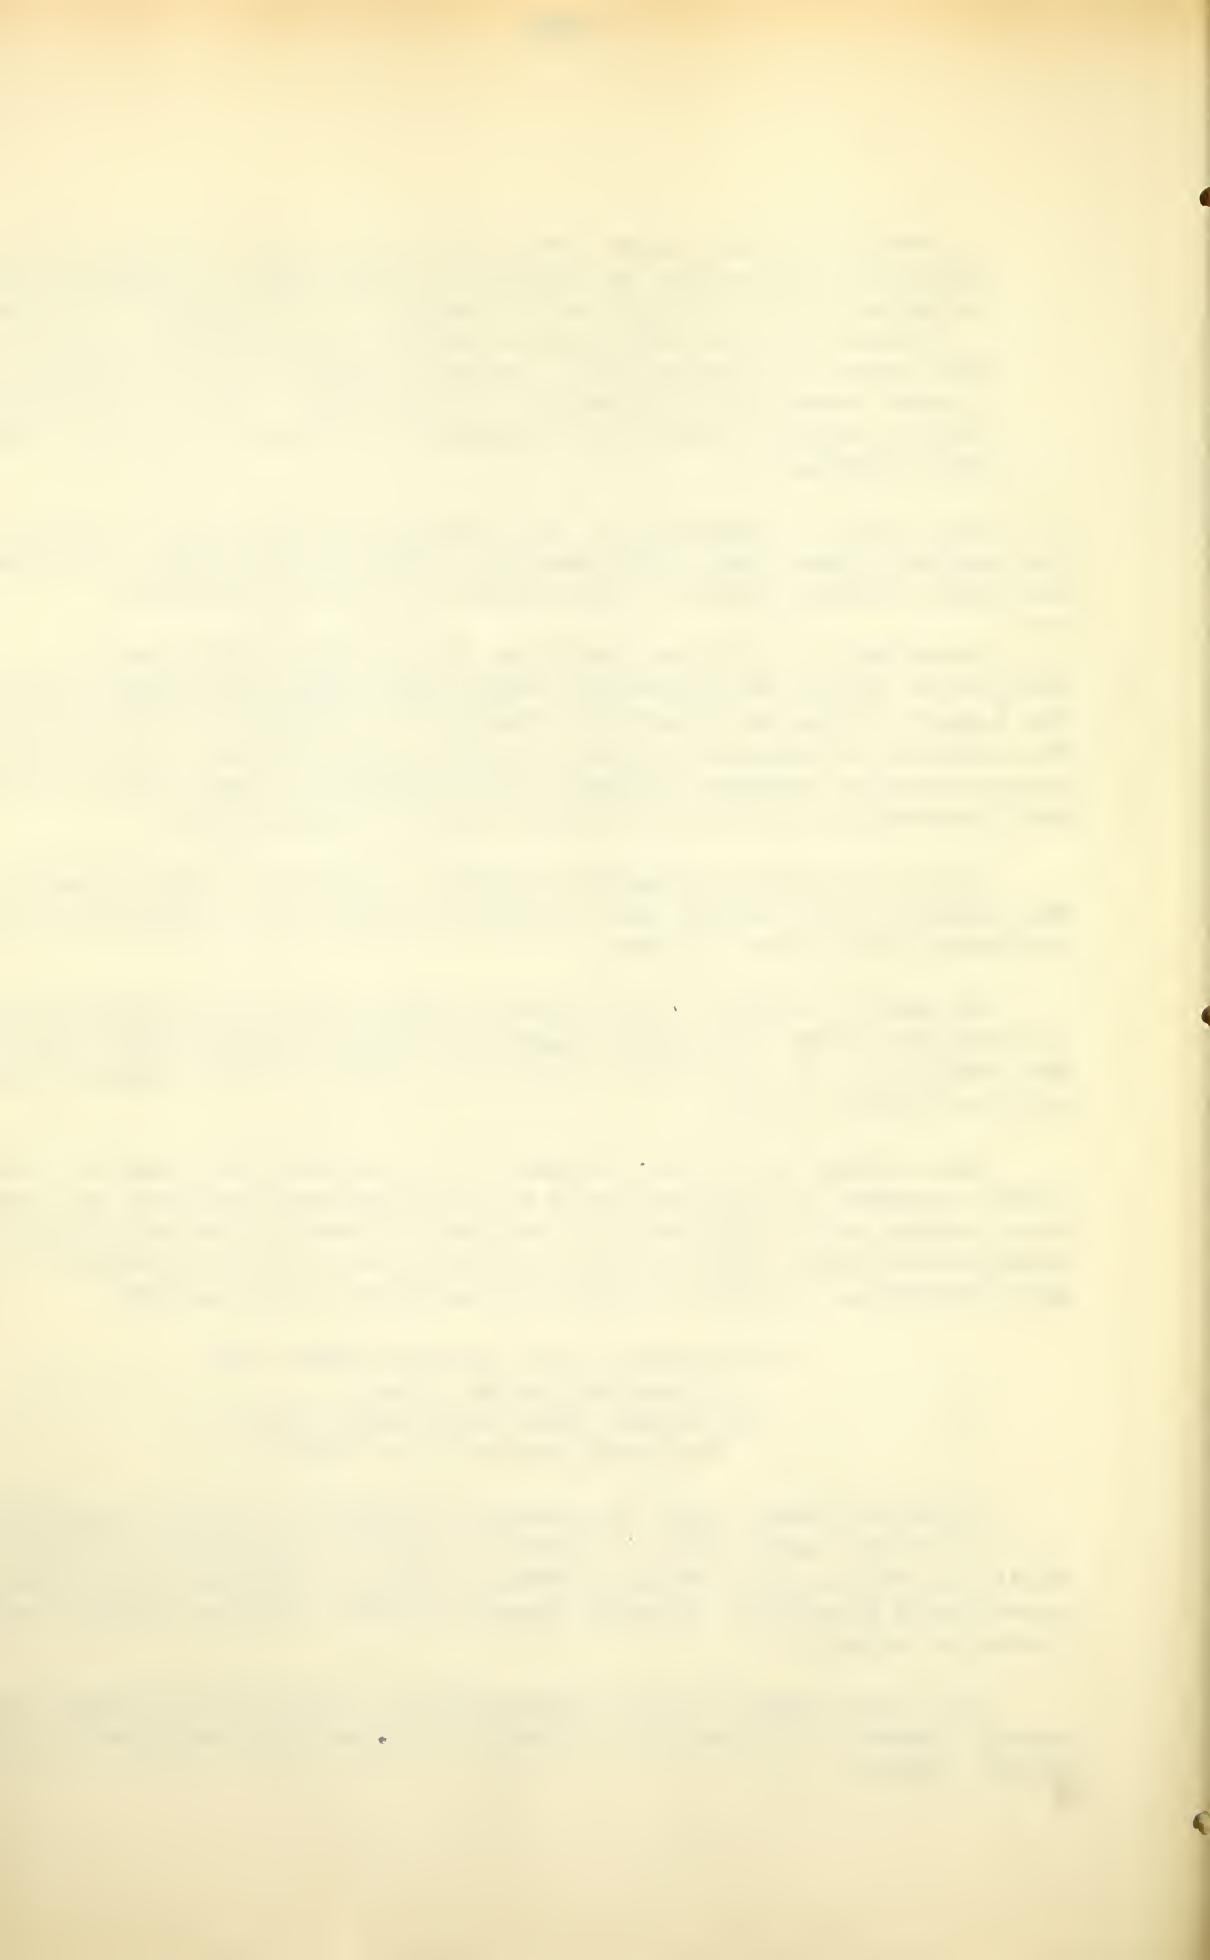

We learn, however, that he expired May, 1754, at his plantation on Chestnut Ridge, in the 65th year of his age, and the 46th year of his settlement, and was buried under the center of the meeting-house which he loved so well.

Thus closed the earthly career of a representative planter, and "first settler" of the early part of the eighteenth century, and whose name, though not associated with any daring deed or heroic act, has nevertheless been handed down to posterity as a shining example of a true Christian, to whom the words of Hittier may be applied:

"With weary hand, yet steadfast will
In old age as in youth
My Master found thee sowing still
The good seeds of his truth."

His life opened under the reign of Queen Anne; he emigrated in the time of Queen Anne, and lived in Maryland while the two Georges, first and second, were on the throne, under the jurisdiction of the three lords Baltimore, Benedict Leonard Calvert, Charles Calvert and Frederick Calvert.

There must have been some extraordinary talent which enabled this sturdy pioneer to lay out for himself a fortune amid the wilds of the infant colony.

That his course was marked by an uncommon fixedness of purpose and strong determination is shown by all his acts.

Resolute and inflexible he carried his religion with him into the primeval forests and established it amid the most unpropitious surroundings and adverse conditions of the new settlement.

He belonged to that class of pioneers of this country who have contributed so much to its civilization and have been so-called the "makers of America."

Distinguished not only as a founder of the Baptist Society in the province, and a life long and earnest supporter of their principles, he was also noted for his liberality, courage and probity.

Every man, however noble, exerts an unconscious influence and power--for weal or wile--which works long after he is gone and forgotten --works through the thoughts and deeds of survivors, with an unfaltering energy.

No one can measure the far reaching influence of this progenitor's character and example, as stamped upon his associates and descending to later generations.

Forcas Sater, his widow, was left with a family of six small children; the eldest son being but fourteen years of age. The two boys, Henry and John were respectively nine and three, while the daughters, Prudence and Zipporetta, were eleven and five years old, and the baby, Joseph, was but six months of age.

The faithful mother, who was even her husband's junior, reared this family of little ones, and lived to see them all grow up and marry. She survived her husband many years, and according to the tradition of one branch of the family, married again and became Mrs. Hossage.

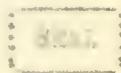

Six months before his death, Sater executed a will, which was duly filed and probated in the Orphan's Court of Baltimore, Md. It is a quaint document, with its ancient spelling and curious phraseology, as viz.:

HENRY BATER'S LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT.

In the fear of Almighty God and reward of the uncertainty of time in this world it doth good to me Henry Bater of Baltimore County in the province of Maryland to make this for my Last Will and Testament relating to those things it hath pleased God to bestow upon me in this world being at this time in perfect memory and sound disposing mind first my will and desire is that all those lawful debts which shall be due from me at the time of my decease with my funeral expenses be well and truly paid. Item I give and bequeath unto my beloved Sons George Bater, Henry Bater, John Bater, all my Lands whereof I shall die possessed; with all my Right, Title and Interest therein and appurtenances thereto belonging to be equally divided among them four with due regard to quality as well as quantity to them their heirs and assigns forever; but provided **** ANY of my aforesaid Sons die without heirs lawfully begotten before arriving at age lawfully to receive an equal part of my Lands as aforesaid; that the same in such case shall by aforesaid Lands shall be so will'd devised unto and among said living sons as aforesaid as they shall arrive at age lawfully to receive the same, such division to be made by three reputable freeholders of the County aforesaid, to be chosen and selected thereto by my heir or heirs aforesaid and no executor hereafter named or the vestry, or the parish wherein I now dwell. Lastly I constitute appoint and ordain neighbour Joseph Taylor my sole Executor of this my Last Will and Testament having no other in the world in witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this 16th day of Nov: 1753.

MARYLAND, Rec.

I Geo. W. Lindsay, -residing Judge of the Orphan's Court for Baltimore City in the State aforesaid, do certify, that the foregoing Attestation of Thos. W. Morse, Register of Wills for said City, is in due form, and by the proper Officer.

Given under my hand, at the City of Baltimore, this 7th day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four.

Geo. W. Lindsay.

STATE OF MARYLAND, Baltimore City, Oct.

I hereby certify, that the honorable Geo. W. Lindsay, by whom the above certificate was given, and who hath thereto subscribed his name, was at the time of so doing, Chief Judge of the Orphans' Court for Baltimore City, duly elected, commissioned and qualified.

In testimony whereof, I hereunto subscribe my name and affix the seal of the said court, this 7th day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four.

Thos. A. Morse,
Register of Wills for Balt. City.

Following the old custom, transplanted from England, he bequeathes all his reality to be equally divided among his sons as they come of age, making no mention of any provision for his daughters.

The selection of his executor, Joseph Taylor, from "one of the people called Quakers," as well as the witnesses, shows the liberal spirit which characterized Henry Bater.

By a curious coincidence this executor also donated the site for the Friend's meeting-house, called Patapsco Station.

"In this vicinity," says Griffith's Annals of Baltimore, "there were the families of Gorsuch, Oliver, Peirce, Lockyer, Matthews, Taylor, and others who were Quakers, for whom the last mentioned gentleman appropriated grounds near the one mile stone on the Harford road, where they erected a meeting house and worshipped many years."

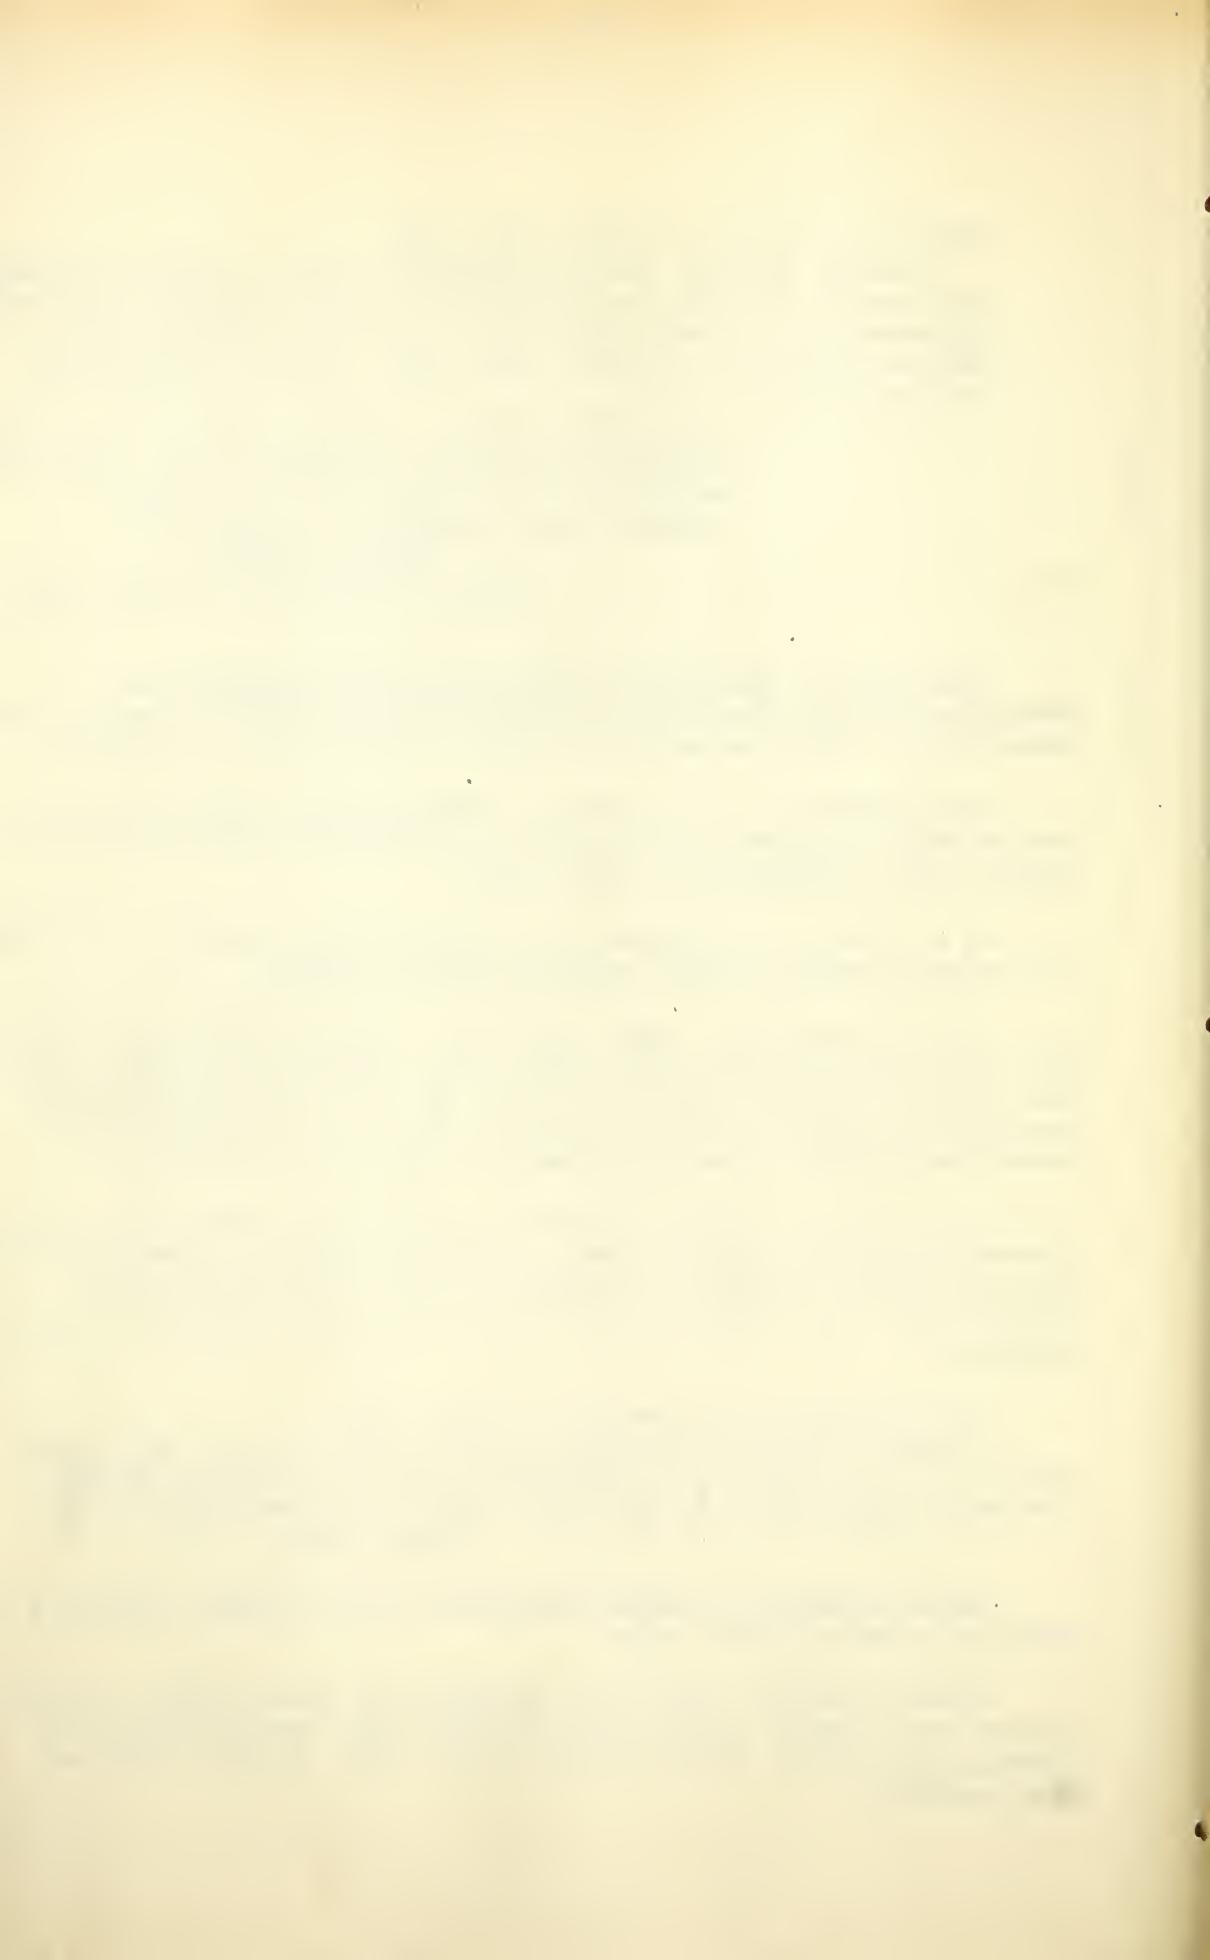

W. Cromwell, of Anne Arundel Co., province of Maryland, (a living descendant of Sir Oliver Cromwell of Irenen Brook, an uncle of the Lord Protector), in his will dated 9th May, 1755, appoints his friend, (the same) Joseph Taylor, and his brother, Joseph Cromwell, executors.

The following is on record 7th July, 1758:

I hereby releast unto Joseph Cromwell all Right and Title and Interest in and unto the Administration on his Brother's, William Cromwell, Estate which by will might have otherwise issued to me.
Joseph Taylor

Sarah, daughter of Joseph Cromwell, married Ezekiel Touson, a brother-in-law of Henry Bater.

Charles Gorsuch, one of the witnesses to Bater's will, was descended from Charles Gorsuch, who patented fifty acres of land comprising the grounds of St. Mary's, soon after the settlement of the province.

Charles, the witness, was born in 1716, and was therefore only thirty-eight years old at the time of later's death. He is buried in the Foster Church yard, and his tombstone is still standing; with the inscription:

C-h-a-r-l-e-s G-o-r-s-u-c-h,
Died April, 1806,
In the 91st Year of his Age

"Few of the personages of past times," says Hawthorne, "(except such as have gained renown in fireside legends as well as in written history), are anything more than mere names to their successors."

The memory of our forefather, however, is a reality, and we trust that this sketch will help to keep the record of his life fresh in the minds of his descendants.

Perhaps no better tribute could be paid him than is expressed on the memorial tablet erected to him on the walls of his meeting-house by his grandaughter, Mrs. Augusta L., wife of the Rev. David Langdon.

In a letter of March 30th, 1855, she writes:

"It had always been one of my mother's most cherished desires to have a tablet placed in the church to the memory of Henry Foster, but after repeated efforts she was not able to accomplish it during her lifetime. After her death I put myself in communication with the Pastor and Trustees of the church and told my will, so I succeeded in getting their consent and had placed at the right of the pulpit an Italian marble tablet to the memory of Henry Foster with suitable inscription, etc."

This stone bears the following:

1803

In Memory of

HENRY FOSTER.

Founder of this Church and Donor of the Property.

"He that soweth to the Spirit
Shall of the Spirit reap life eternal."

CHAPTER VI.

"We are builders, and each one
Should cut what comes as best he can;
Every life is but a stone,
Every one shall hew his own."
— Bishop Doane.

"I love to people these solitudes again," writes Cecilia Thaxter, "and think that those who lived here centuries ago were decent God-fearing folks, — most of them, — for so tradition says," and in reviewing the history of the families of the yeomen colonists, one cannot fail to notice the deep religious impress which marked their lives.

It would be interesting to recall some of the fellow workers with Henry Water in the organization of this little band of Christians, the original members of this church.

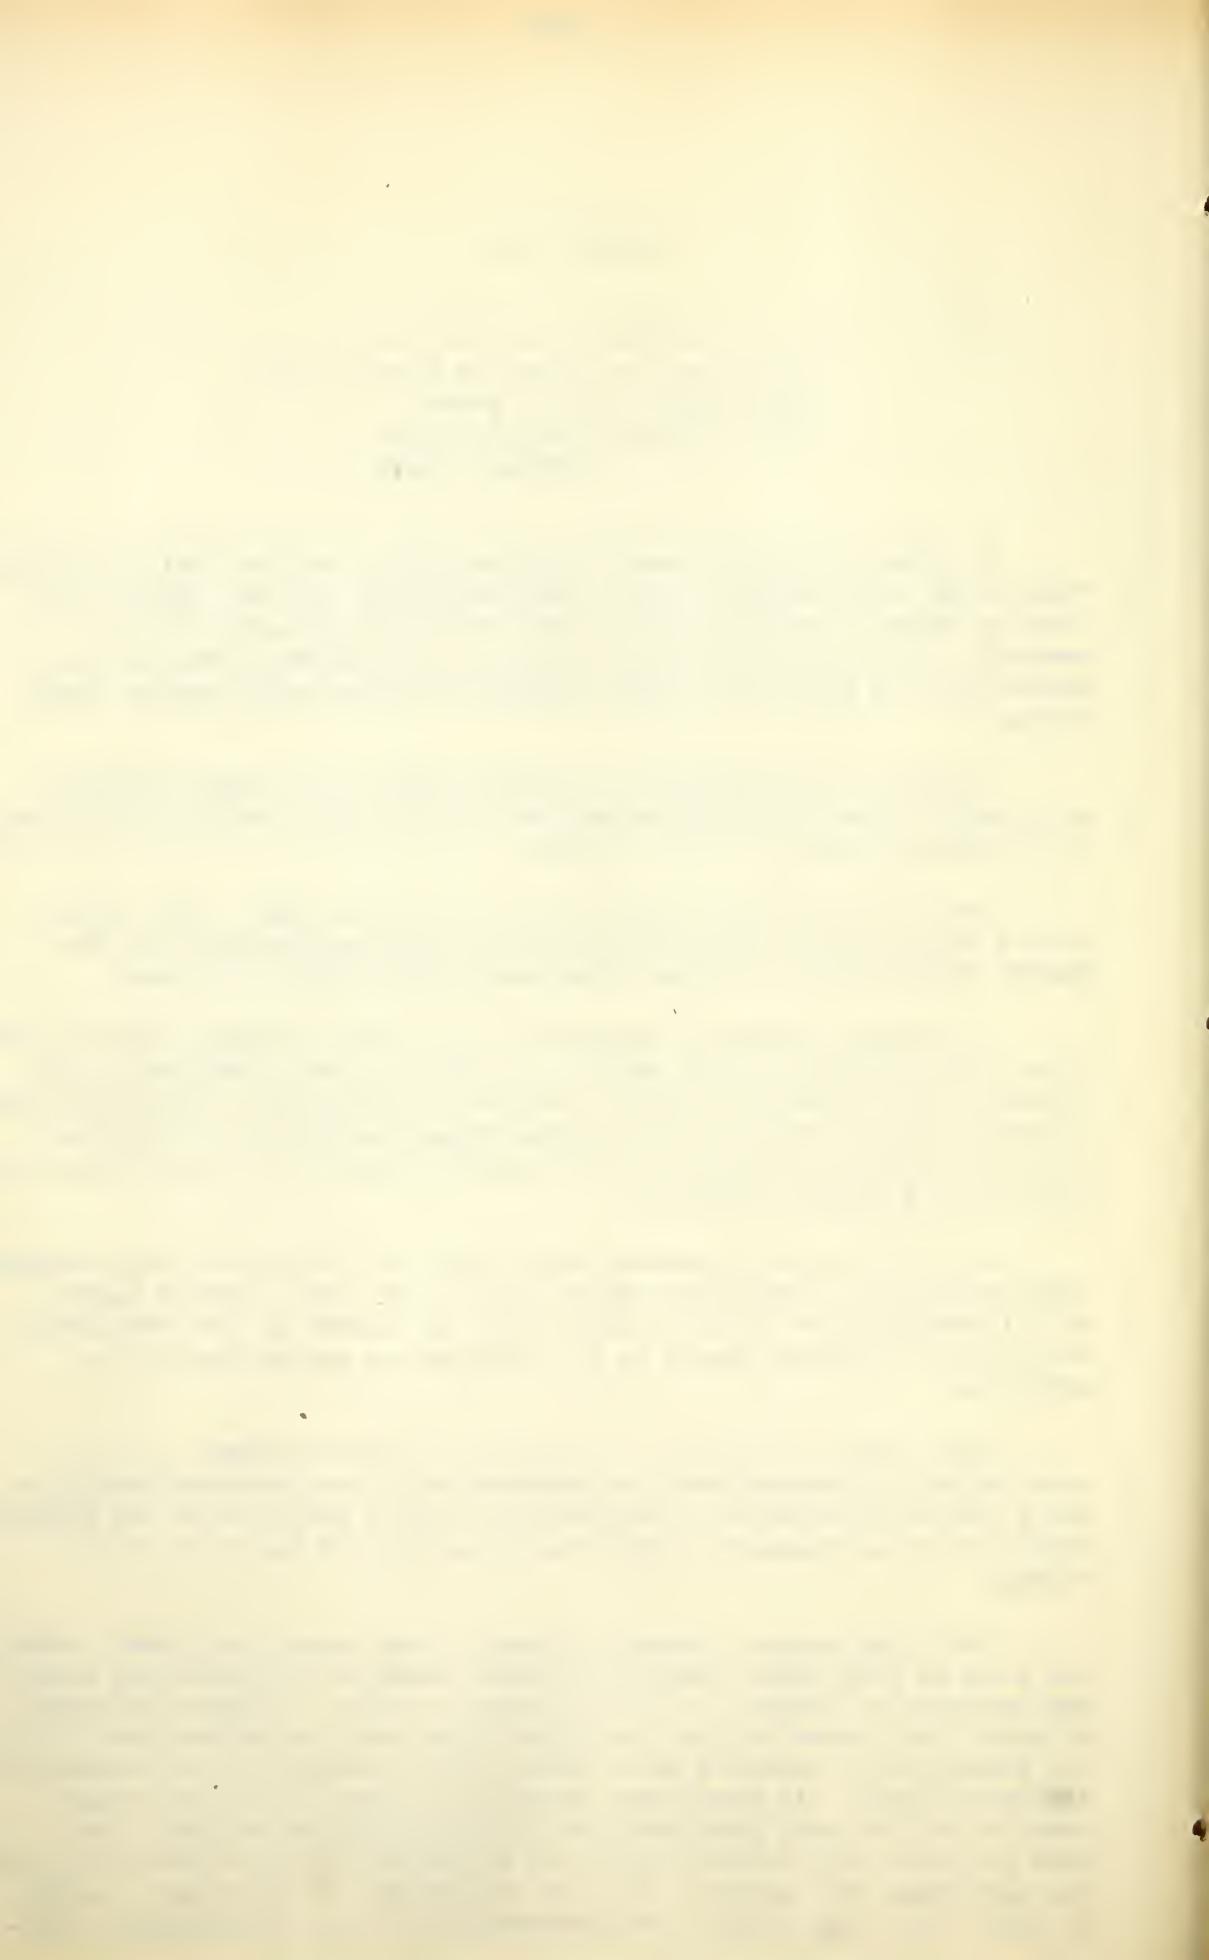

Many of the emigrant settlers in 'ye oiden time,' who formed groups along these shores, came from the same neighborhood in the parent country, with similar religious associations and views.

"An English Baptist," says Rev. J. S. Cook, "Henry Water was the first to introduce Baptist usages in Maryland," and Sprague, in his "Annals of the American Church," writes: "In Maryland, there were few Baptists who had removed either from England as early as 1700; but the first Baptist church in the Colony was founded by Henry Water, a layman and a General Baptist."

If the visiting preachers whom Water invited before the meeting-house was built, George Gylesfield was at the first Baptist Church of Philadelphia from 1723 to 1745, when he removed to the New Jersey church of Middletown, where he is mentioned as one of the gifted brethren.

Paul Palmer, another, was a native of the Province. After ordination in Connecticut, he preached for a considerable period in New Jersey and Maryland, then settled in Port Caroline on the Chowan river, where he founded in 1747 the first Baptist church of that colony.

The first regular pastor of Water's meeting-house — Henry Lovall, was born in Cambridge, England, in 1674, came to this country, young, and preached at Newport, R. I., as early as 1710. After a pastorate of about four years at Chestnut Ridge, Maryland, he removed to Virginia, but subsequently returned to Chestnut Ridge, where he is mentioned as living in 1772. His successor, Benjamin Griffith, is said to have been one of the most prominent of the denominations at that time. Born in Wales 16th October, 1688, he emigrated to the colonies in 1710, and commenced his ministry with the Quakerery, Pennsylvania, church in 1722. For many years he was connected with the Philadelphia Association and died the 21st of October, 1768.

Among the trustees of the meeting-house, and those to whom the property was deeded, was William Townson (father of Dorcas Peter), who is described as one of the "Friends who belong to the Church Congregation or People of God, commonly called General Baptists," and who was not only allied to Peter by ties of marriage and religion, but was also a neighbor and likewise a large land owner.

Dr. Archibald of Baltimore Co., Md., furnishes the following:

"The assessment ledger of Sheriff Hall, kept in 1763, shows that Mr. Townson was assessed in that year for 400 acres in three tracts as follows: Burner's name - Townson's Chance - and Adam's Garden, 200 acres, with 200 acres of vacant land added. This land was in back river (Baltimore), which included all the country north of Baltimore for ten miles and embracing the present Towsontown.

"Thomas and Ezekiel (sons) were also assessed in the same manner."

An account of the origin of the Townson's in America is given by a descendant residing near Flint Hill, Appamanock Co., Va., in a letter of June 7th, 1894, to Dr. Isaac L. Walker:

"My grandfather was named Captain Thomas Townson, he having been a captain in the war of 1812. He was raised in Towsontown and Baltimore and married a Miss Moran of Stafford Co., Virginia. I was named for him, my name being "Thomas Townson Smith."

Mr. Smith continues:

"Not after much trouble I found in Baltimore and elsewhere this to be a fact about the Townson family.— William Townson "the settler," came from Germany (from Union I think) to London, he married Catherine Allen of London. *** He emigrated to America and settled at Towsontown, Md. He had four sons, one of whom was my grandfather Townson's father."

Mr. Townson married a second time, Dinah, daughter of John and Rachel Wilmett of Maryland. Another daughter was the wife of William Cromwell, previously alluded to as having had the same executor (Joseph Taylor) as Henry Peter.

There were others of the same name in the Province about this period, probably brothers of William, (for the banks of early emigrants often included two or three brothers), for among the Register of Wills for Baltimore County is the record that Thomas Townson died in 1731 intestate. Also the will of Joseph Townson, dated 17th January,

1745, witnessed by Mr. and Thomas Fowson and John Bond - Proved 5th
March, 1745.

Mr. Fowson, "the settler," and father-in-law of Henry Carter, survived the founding of the church thirty years, making his last will the 8th of April, 1772, and expired within two months, as the will was probated the 6th of July following.

This document commences:

"In the name of God, Amen; I, William Fowson, of Baltimore County.
In the Province of Maryland, Directoral."

And then makes disposition. (as he reverently expresses it),
"of what worldly estate it hath pleased You to bestow upon me," etc.

Thomas Bailey, his son-in-law, is constituted sole executor, and several slaves, other personal property and the following tracts of realty divided:

"Gunner's Acre," on which Ezekiel his son was living,
conveyed from said Gott.

"John's Garden," conveyed from Mr. Bailey to Mrs. Carter and wife.

"Vulcaney," 400 acres on south side of Great Falls of Patapsco river, patented to Mrs. Fowson 10th July, 1725.

"Little Vally," conveyed from his son-in-law John Every. And a lot of land in Jones' Addition to Baltimore town. Also a lot with improvements "had in exchange from Brian Philibout, lying before Mr. Aspinwall's door."

J. Young, Deputy Commissary Baltimore Co., made the following certificate to the will:

"August 1st, 1772, the Widow renounces the devise in the Will and abilities by what the Law gives her."

Although ample provision was made for Finah, she was dissatisfied, and in her will dated 27th July, 1772, and probated 10th October, 1783, names her daughter Ruth, wife of George Green, sole legatee of her "estate in Maryland and elsewhere," probably because Ruth received no other inheritance from her father than one cow and a calf.

The site of the first Baptist Church of Baltimore City, on the corner of Light and Front Streets, (Jones' Addition) belonged to the Fowson estate, and was purchased from Mrs. Bailey the executor, in 1773, for 150 pounds. A part of the church was then built, and Rev.
John Davis of Harford sometimes preached until an organization was effected January 12th, 1780, when a church, school house and parsonage were erected, and continued in use until replaced by the Merchants Shot Tower in 1828.

Towson (formerly Jessontown), a thriving town, seven miles north of Baltimore, and five miles distant from Brooklandville, owes its name to this family who originally owned most of the land in this vicinity, and in 1801 was chosen as the seat of Baltimore County.

"The result was celebrated in the new county seat, with much enthusiasm, and with a grand illumination, the old frame tavern belonging to A. S. Chew, on the top of Carter Hill, being set on fire, the more fittingly to honor the important occasion."

-- Scherf's History of Baltimore Co.

An ancient highway to Philadelphia from Baltimore passed through this old town, and was the route for the stages before the turnpike was built. It is said that the line of the former can yet be traced through Midway's Woods until it intersects the Jones road near Mr. Ezra's at Towson.

In the year 1775, when the York road was resurveyed, Ezekiel Towson, (son of William) considering himself injured by the proposed route, petitioned the General Assembly for relief, whereupon it was enacted that:

"The York turnpike road when altered shall pass by or near the buildings of the said Ezekiel Towson; that is to say, beginning for the said alteration at the place where the turnpike road intersects the orchard of John Hopkins, and running thence with a straight line until it intersects the old York road at or near Ezekiel Towson's tavern."

His petition recites that he is the owner of a tract of land "on which there are considerable improvements; that he hath for many years kept the said place a house for public entertainment," etc.

During the War of Independence, the said Towson was one of the Committee of Observation from Back River Upper 16th January, 1775, and at an election held in Baltimore, September 13, 1775, was chosen a member of the Provincial Assembly.

Just a year later, the Committee of Safety of Baltimore County resolved:

"That Lieut. Ezekiel Towson be recommended to the honorable Council of Safety as a proper person to command the Guard to be stationed at the Magazine." -- ( Maryland Archives, 1776.)

Consequently the said Council on the 26th of September, 1776, appointed him "Captain of the Guards and to have Captain's pay."

Ezekiel's first wife, Sarah, daughter of Joseph and Deborah Cromwell, was born May 20th, 1738; her sister, Rebecca, married John Jooley, who was interred in Bater's church-yard. Bata Johnson, the second wife, outlived her husband, and died December 1st, 1808, aged 88.

The strong attachment which united the two original settlers, heads of the Johnson and Bater families, continues to bind together their children and kinsmen.

The record of the Baltimore Co. Orphan's Court -- Second Tuesday, October, 1780, show that: "Jacob, orphan of J. J. Foiley Johnson, chose Joseph Bater for his guardian. -- Henry Bater became security of guardian." These two latter were sons of Henry Bater, (settler).

There is on file among the State Court records, April, 1783, that J. Johnson, an orphan and son of Bata Johnson, was bound to Joseph Bater to learn the trade of hatter, and also August, 1785, that Billa Johnson, being 20 years of age, chose Jacob R. Johnson for his guardian with Henry Bater as security.

In a paper to the wife of Henry Bater, and as a connecting chain, we are enabled to live on account of the present condition of the church from the pen of Rev. Charles Adey, the young pastor, thus closing down its history to our day.

"The corporation," says Mr. W. A. Foster, the treasurer, "bears the name of 'The Baptist Church at Bater's meeting house, Baltimore County,' which is its title in law."

"Historic Bater's Church entered upon a new epoch in its history on June 1st, 1850, when the relation that had existed for some time previous between this Church and the Calvary Baptist Church of Johnson, the youngest child of former Bater's, now severed. This separation was caused by the fact that Johnson Church had grown to feel her size and importance. Established in the centre of a steadily growing town and evinced a constituency to draw upon, her progress promised greater rapidity than that of the other church.

"The church being now without a pastor, invited Charles Adey, then a student just completing his second year at Crozer Theological Seminary, to come and preach for them.

The following month a council of ordination was called by the Bater's Church at the request of the Broadway Baptist Church of Providence, N. Y., of which Bro. Adey was at that time a member, and the newly elected pastor was set apart by the Baptist Church of Langdon for the work of the gospel ministry.

"The land denoted for enlarging the burying ground previous to his arrival had not been enclosed, and the fence of the old yard being very dilapidated, a new one was required.

"The pastor, with the aid of a few of the brethren, and supported by many friends, undertook the task. A fence was built, sufficient money raised to defray all expenses, and the whole property is now in one enclosure.

"At the commencement of the present pastorate the membership numbered thirty-eight; the present number is fifty, and those souls, with few exceptions, are living within a radius of three miles of the building.

"They maintain regular weekly services and conduct an interesting and prosperous Bible school and are a live force in the Christian world."

Note:- Regarding the genealogy of the Fowsons, Mr. Jacob Folley Fowson of Baltimore, Md., writes Feb. 2d, 1890; I have my Grandfather's will which records the following: Mr. Folley Fowson (my great grandfather, born 1730, died Nov. 6th, 1767 aged 37 years).

The sons and daughter of J. Folley Fowson:

Susannah; born Oct. 3d, 1760.

Jacob Folley Fowson (my grandfather) born Jan. 3d, 1763.

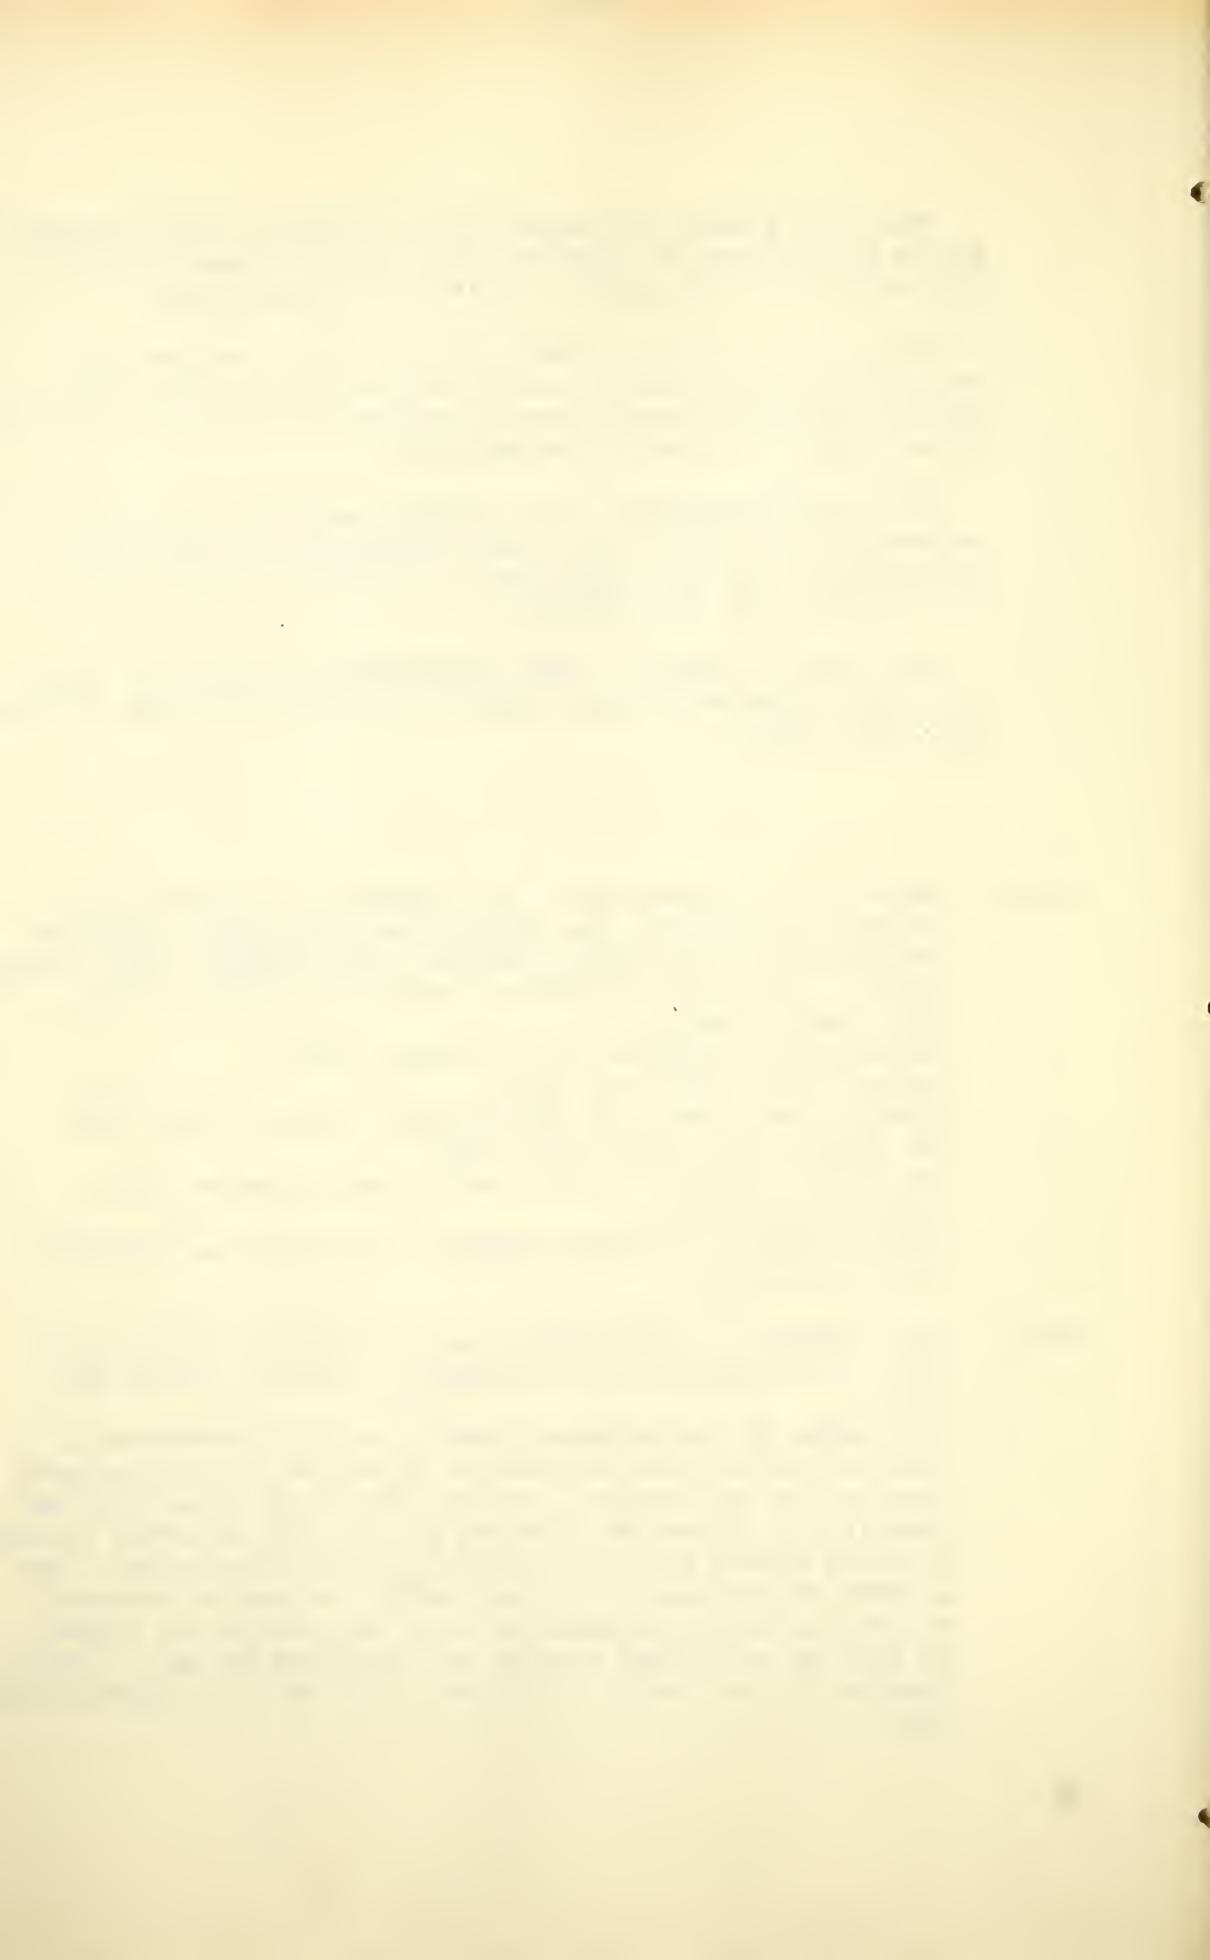

Mrs. Fowson; born Jan. 11th, 1765.

My father was named William and I have a brother and a son named William.

Nathan Fowson, Bymaster General U. S. Army, was a cousin of my grandfather.

Note:- Mrs. Laurnlin, of Baltimore, has sole ownership to the church as explained in the following letter of March 23d, 1897:

"In regard to the communion service which I presented to Sater's Church which belonged to my mother, as the youngest daughter of Rev. Peter L. Miller, it was the same which he (Rev. P. L. Miller) used at the church, but it having become a little abused from use, little tin and some dents, I had a heavy silver plating put on, merely to give it a bright, smooth and new appearance, also had an inscription placed on each to the effect that it was presented by me, (a granddaughter of Rev. Peter L. Miller), with date of presentation, etc."

THREE GENERATIONS PASTED AWAY AND ANOTHER GENERATION GROWN; BUT DAY DAYS ARE IDENTICAL.

—Ecclesiastes I.

HENRY B. R., born in 1690 in one of the western shires of England, of Danish extraction, came to this country in 1709, and first settled in Virginia. He subsequently became a colonist of the Province of Maryland, and established a plantation at Chestnut Ridge, ten miles north of the City of Baltimore, from grants of land which he received from Lord Baltimore.

He married (first) a Miss Stephenson about 1730 — no issue.

He married (second) 1740, Dorcas, daughter of William and Catherine (Allen) Towsonton, of Towsontown, Maryland.

Henry Bater died May, 1784, at his plantation, in the 65th year of his age, and the 46th year of his settlement.

The earliest progenitor of his family of which we have authentic information is William Towsonton, who was an original settler from London, England, and after whom, Towsontown, Baltimore County, Md., was called.

THIRD GENERATION IN AMERICA.

William Towsonton, married (first) Catherine Allen of London, a descendant of Oliver Cromwell; (second) Dinah. He died June 1772.

3. SECOND GENERATION

Children of William and Catherine (Allen) Towsonton:

1. Ezekiel; married Anna
2. Rachel, married Thomas Bailey.
3. Dorcas; married Henry Bater.
4. John
5. Thomas.
6. Ruth, married Green.
7. Catherine; married John Avery.
8. Charles.

Child of William and Dinah Towsonton:

Abram.

THIRD GENERATION

Child of Ezekiel and Ruth Towson:

Ann.

Child of Thomas and Rachel (Towson) Miller:

Rachel.

Children of Catherine (Towson) Gvery:

1. William Towson Alien.
2. Isaac Towson Gvery.

Children of Henry and Dorcas (Towson) Sater.

- I. GEORGE; born 26th October, 1740; married Rachel Hamilton, and lived in Baltimore County, Md., until his decease April, 1768, aged 28. He left a son and daughter.
- II. PRUDENCE; born 25th November, 1743; married 21st September, 1762, Benjamin Howard of Baltimore Co., Md., and then moved to Wilkesboro, in what is now Wilkes County, North Carolina. She had four sons and eight daughters, and died 2nd September, 1822.

One of her descendants, Mrs. H. H. Turnley writes: "My mother told me when I was a little girl something about my grandmother Howard, which was so interesting to me that I have never forgotten it, although I am now 70 years old. It was this:

In those days there were no factories in America, and the men did most of the weaving of cloth on hand looms. A man by the name of Sater had Howard weaving for him, (I imagine he was running a large business of that kind). Howard and Sater's daughter concluded to get married. Sater opposed it; but they all got married. She jumped out of the dining-room window and ran away with him. All turned out well, and they were all satisfied afterwards. Howard and wife moved to North Carolina, and when their daughter Polly grew up, grand-mother Howard took Polly and went with her back to Baltimore, five hundred miles on horseback, all alone, to see her kinsfolk.

This I have no doubt came from the mouth of the old lady to my mother in North Carolina, where she knew her very well. She also told me of some other interesting and amusing occurrences that happened during their travels. I think she must have been a remarkable woman, of great energy."

(as Prudence was only eleven years of age when her father died, the latter referred to above could not have been Henry Sater; but was probably her brother George, who after-ward joined them in Elkesboro.)

Concerning the ancestry of Prudence's husband, Mr. Geo. A. Howard of Palestine, Texas, (a descendant) writes: "I learned from my mother that the Howards were English and emigrated from England, and settled in Maryland."

Benjamin Howard was born 17th February, 1742, and deceased 4th June, 1818.

III. HENRY; born 27th April, 1746; married Hannah, daughter of John Stansbury of Baltimore Co., Md., and lived and died in his native country.

IV. DISCRETION; born 3d April 1749; married on March, 1766, Thomas Walker of Baltimore City, and had eight sons and three daughters. She died 7th Dec. 1813.

Thomas Walker, her husband, was born September, 1741, in the then town of Baltimore, near Jones Falls, west of a stone mill and near the present intersection of Calvert and Mata streets. According to the family register:

"At the age of twenty years he married Discretion Sater. Shortly after he took to the pursuit of a farmer and settled upon a piece of land near by. From this first settlement he removed to a farm, four miles south of Westminster in Carroll County, where he remained until April 1796, when he removed to the City of Baltimore and continued there until his death in 1818 (Oct. 16), aged seventy-six years, and was buried at the Baptist meeting house upon the plantation of Henry Sater, where he was married." His wife is buried by his side. Their graves are marked by two marble monuments near the front entrance of the church.

There is a family tradition (perhaps legendary) about the elopement of Discretion, in which it is related that she ran away from home, and jumped upon Thomas Walker's horse, where seated behind him, they rode to a minister's and were married.

Thomas Walker is described as "of middle stature though well proportioned. His costume was always plain, with the old custom knee breeches and shoe buckles, with the clear soul showing through his blue eyes - white brow and bald head bare, the impress of thou'rt."

The will of Thomas Walker, executed 12th of September, 1816, and probated 24th of October, 1818, is filed in Baltimore, Md.

He bequeathes all his personal property to his wife, Discretion, and also all his real and landed property during her natural life. She is made sole executrix. Among his different parcels of real estate, was his plantation and tract of land in the forks of Patapsco falls, called "Society Hill," another tract called "Reuben's Fancy," and another tract called "Walker's Paradise," all adjoining and being in Baltimore County.

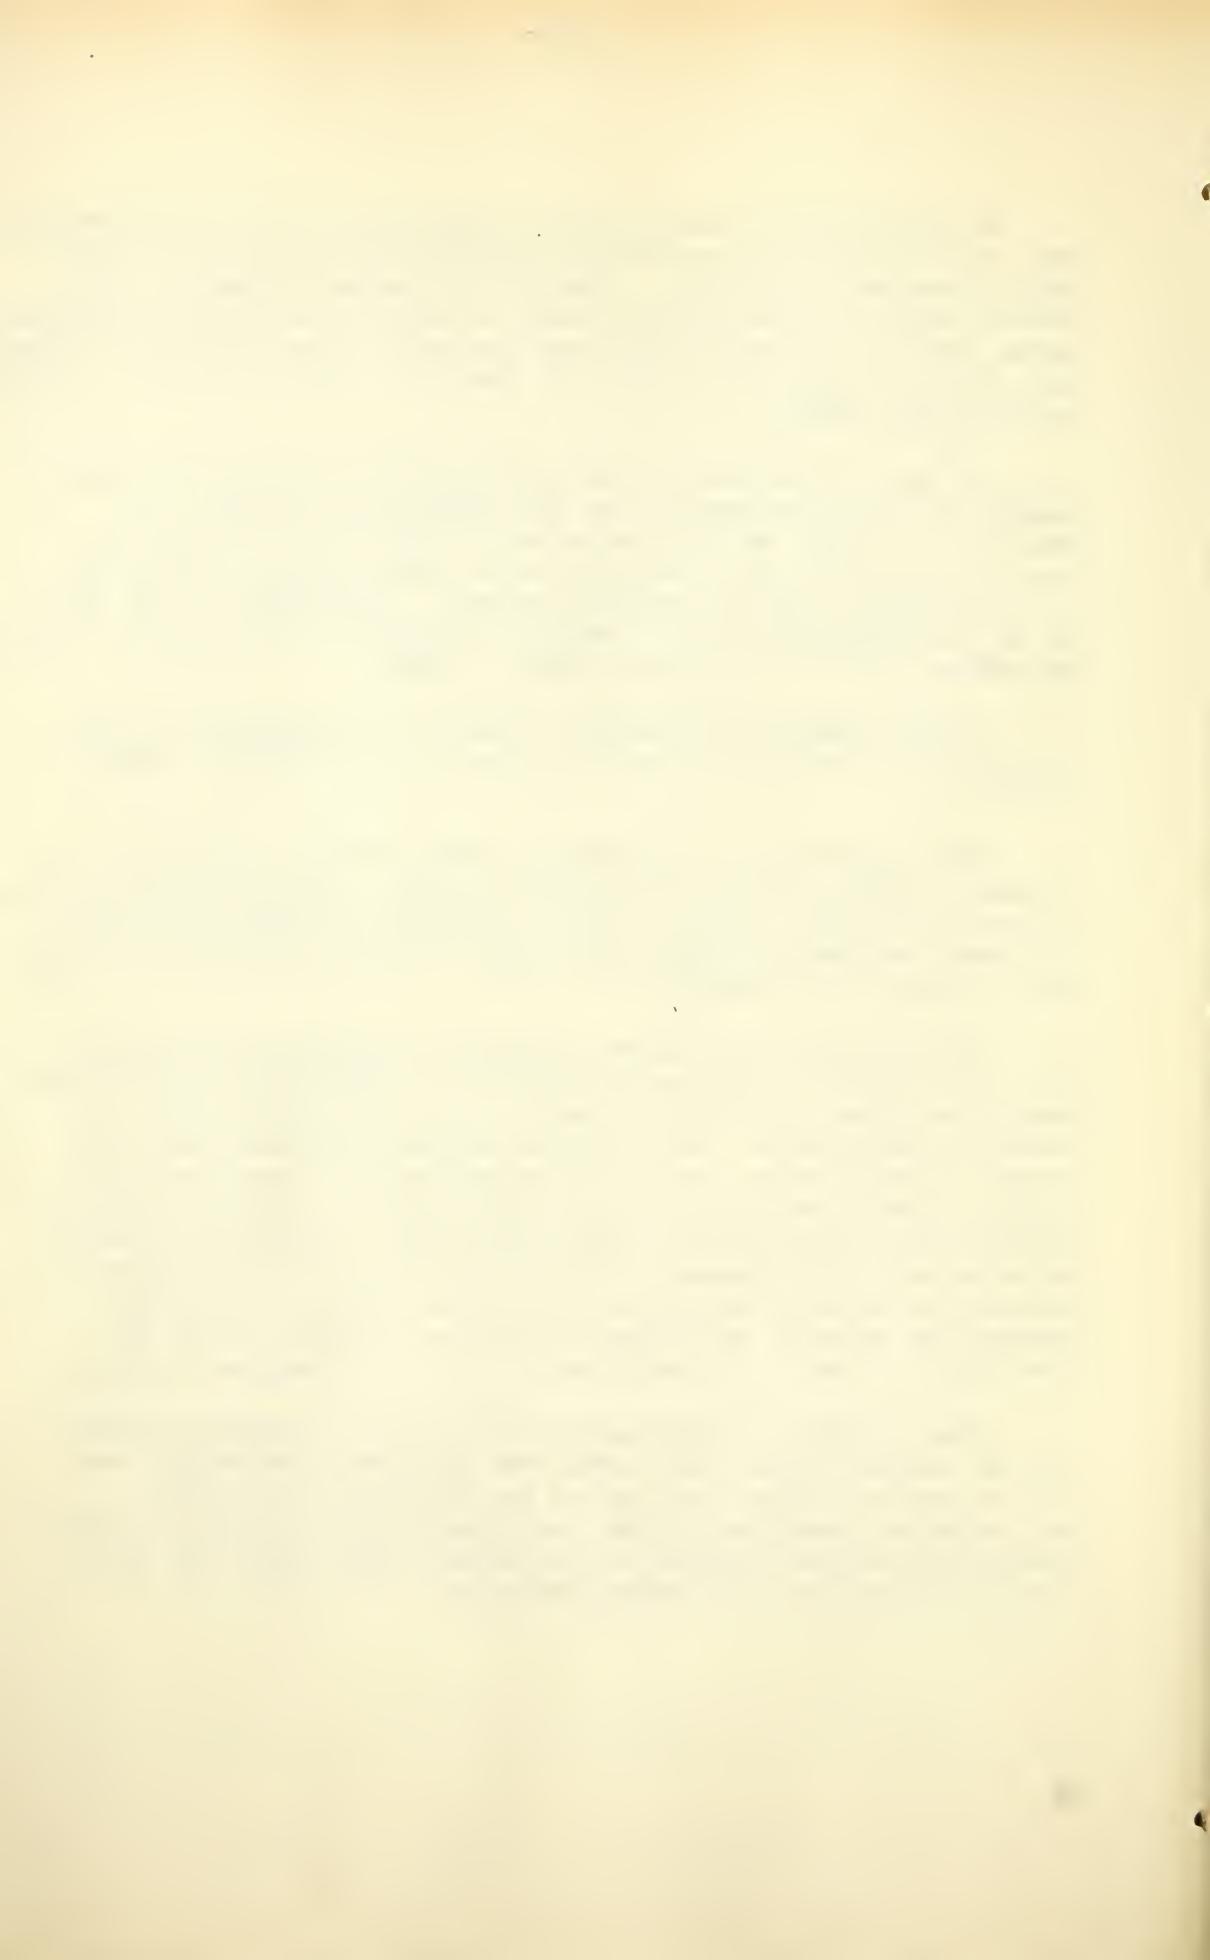

The earliest account of the Walker family in Virginia is contained in the "Genealogy of the Page Family in Virginia," by Dr. J. C. W. Page, in which he says: "The Walkers of Virginia came from Staffordshire, England, about 1650, at an early period in the history of the Colony of Virginia. The Walker family Bible is in the possession of Dr. Bernard L. Walker of Stevensville, Kings and Queens Co., Va., and was printed in 1689."

"Thomas Walker of Gloucester County, Va., progenitor of the Walker family in Virginia, was a member of the Colonial Assembly in 1662."

This progenitor had a grandson, Thomas Walker, of Kings and Queens Co., Va., who had a son Thomas Walker, of Albemarle Co., Va., of whom Dr. Page's remarks: "He was probably the first white man that ever entered Kentucky, having gone there in 1750, or thirteen years before Daniel Boone."

The history of the Walker family in Pennsylvania, and their first appearance in America, is as viz.: "There were five brothers came from Wales in a British trading ship in the year 1687, and landed at New Castle. Two of the brothers died soon after they landed. Lewis Walker, one of these brothers, purchased a large tract of land from William Penn at Valley Forge, where it is said William Penn visited him the following year. He erected a commodious stone edifice thereon, at which a meeting of the Society of Friends was established in the year 1713. The same house was occupied by General Washington as his headquarters during the Revolutionary war." -- Biographical history of Lancaster County.

Isaac Walker, a descendant of this original settler writes: "About the year 1730, (as I have been informed), three brothers by the name of Walker, said to be the sons of Isaac Walker, emigrated to Pennsylvania from the Principality of Wales, one of them, Lewis Walker, settled at the Valley Forge, near the line between Montgomery and Chester Counties.

"He was my grandfather's grandfather, and I have been told that he had a brother Thomas, which name was a common name among the descendants of Lewis Walker. Isaac was also a very common name in the family. My own father's name and also that of my great grandfather was Isaac. Although I am not certain, yet I have reason to believe that either Thomas, the brother of Lewis Walker, or one of nine of his sons, settled in the southern part of our County, contiguous to the Maryland line, as there is a large family connection of the Walkers in that locality, and there appears to be a strong family resemblance between their families and ours, and the names Isaac and Thomas are common names amongst them also.

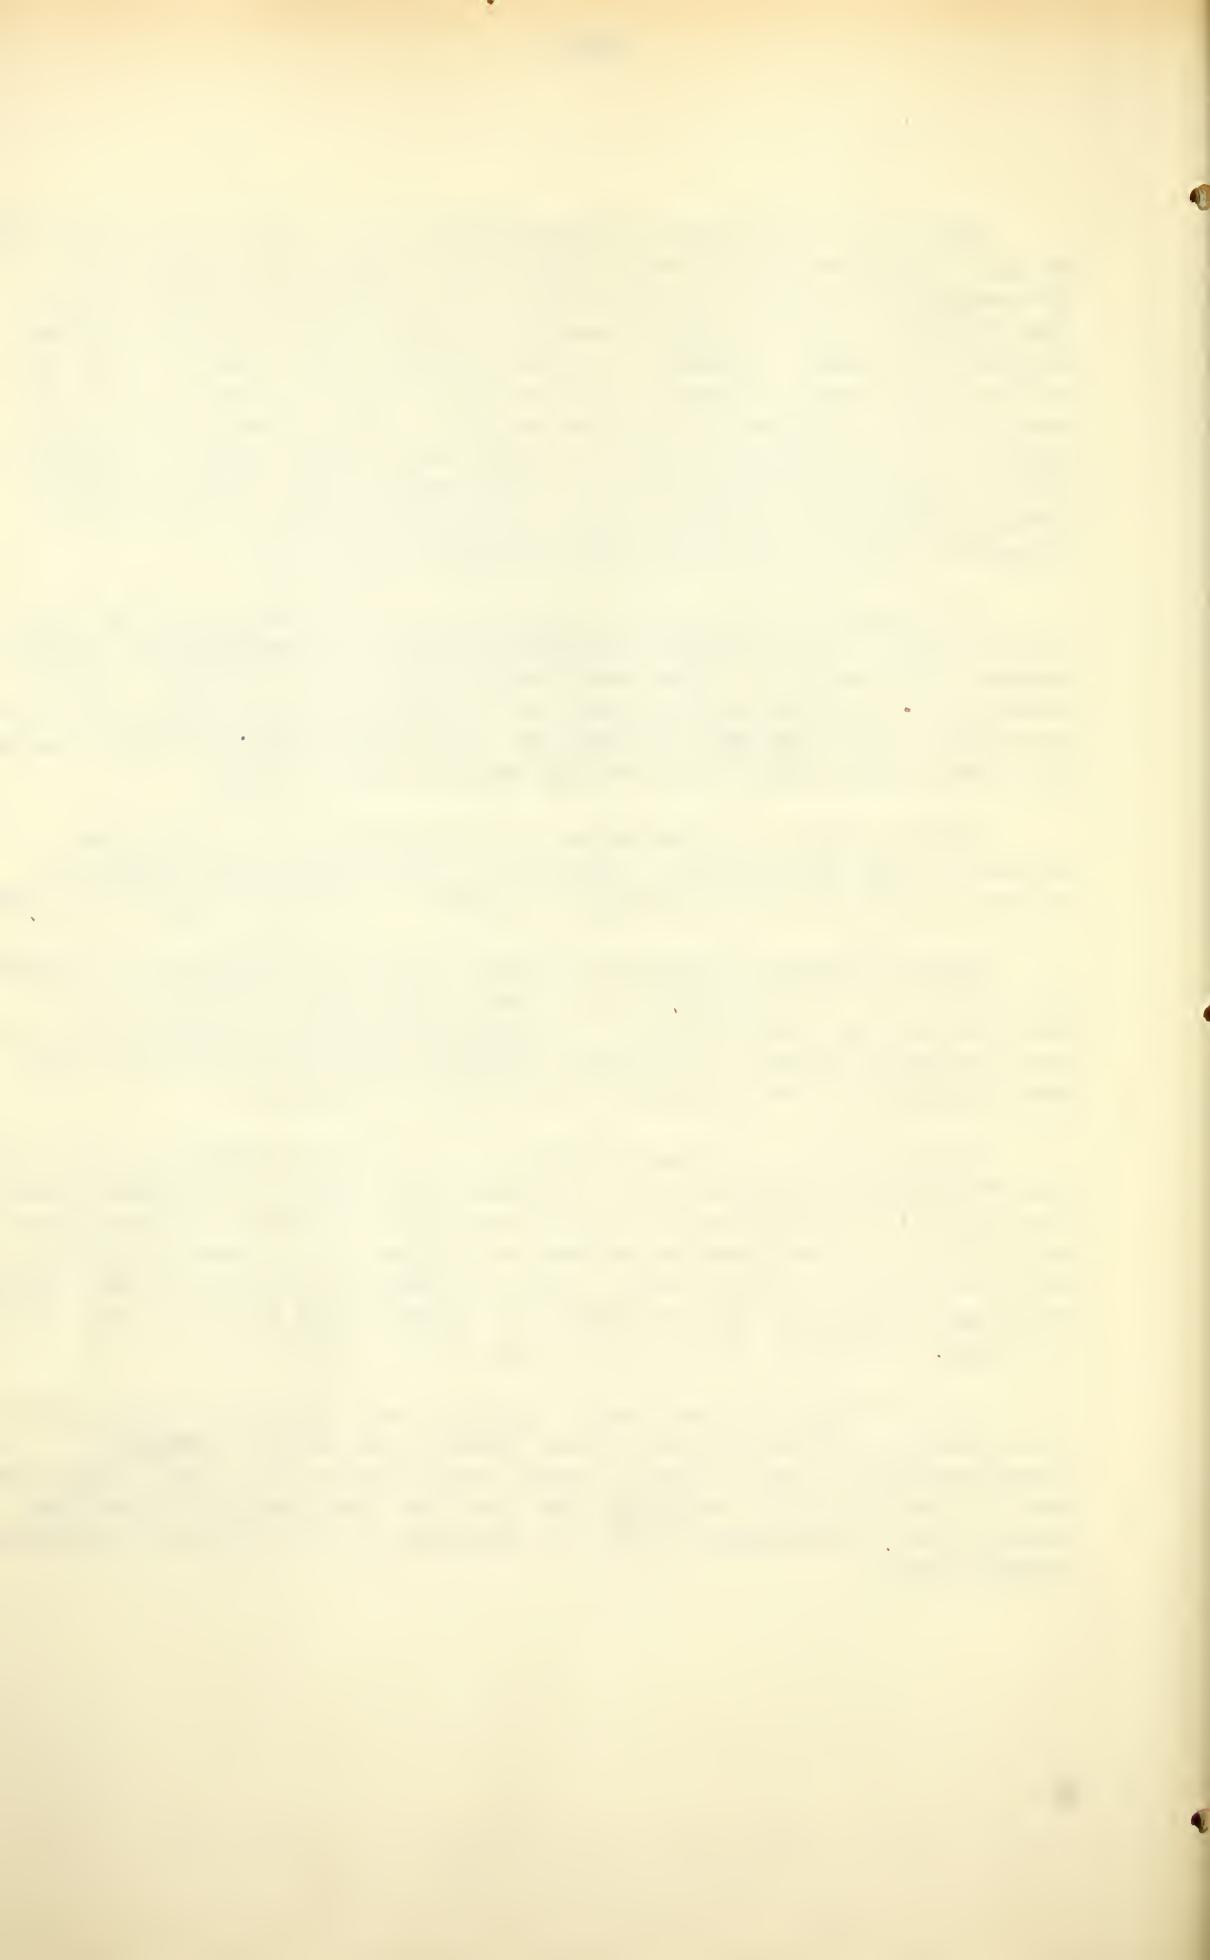

"My grandfather was the grandson of Lewis Walker, and was born in the year 1746, and in all probability was the grandson of Thomas Walker, his brother. There was also a branch of the Walker family settled in the Shenandoah Valley near Winchester, Virginia, who were distantly related to my grandfather, and quite likely to yours, also the name Isaac Walker was a common name in that family.

"Isaac Walker of Winchester, has visited here at our place within my own recollection, (about the year 1827), and I heard my father say that he was distantly related." Ga., Pa., April 3d, 1876.

There is another account by Mary Roberts, of Schuylkill, Chester Co., Pa., viz.; "A record of our great grandparents, Lewis and Mary Walker, of Great Valley, Freyfflin Township, Chester Co., Pa., their families down to the sixth generation that have lived in the same place, and the same name of the Walker family."

"Lewis Walker, of Great Valley, by the Spring Leobeth, now the residence of William, left Merriath in Wales, in the year 1666, and arrived in Pennsylvania in the year 1687, after a tedious passage of 13 months. Mary Morris sailed in the same ship, whom he afterwards married. He purchased a tract of land belonging to David Evans of Adnor, Delaware Co., on which he resided some time; he then bought a valuable tract of land in the Great Valley, etc."

The genealogy of the Walker family, according to the memory of Isaac Walker, of Buckley Co., Va., January 20, 1846, recites: "My grandfather, Abel Walker, moved from Chester Co., Pa., during or near the time of the Revolutionary war, and settled at the Falling Waters, near the Potowmack River, in Buckley Co., Va., eight miles from Martinsburg."

V. JOHN; born 1st April, 1754, removed to Wilkesboro, Wilkes County, North Carolina, with his sister Prudence Howard, married and settled there, and had a family of several sons and one daughter. Wilkesboro is near Molan's Ford, on the Yadkin River, where the celebrated Daniel Boone then lived, his father having removed from Buck's Co., Pa., in 1752, when his son was 18 years old.

VI. JOSEPH; born 25th December, 1783; married 7th October, 1784, Hannah, daughter of William and Martha Levering, of Roxborough, Pa., and had four sons and three daughters.

They moved to the West in 1811 with six children, and settled in Crosby Township, Hamilton County, Ohio.

According to the history of Hamilton County, "they landed at Cincinnati and pushed their way across the country to the fertile Congress lands beyond the Great Miami, where he first settled among friends near Harrison, and then in 1812, he farmed a piece at John Cotton in the fertile Miami Valley. In 1813, he bought a tract of about three hundred acres from Capt. Jacob White, occupied by his son, Prudence White, at ten dollars per acre, having declined to purchase in the Mill Creek Valley, where Cannonsville now stands, on the ground that it was too high. The original Sater tract is now in part the property of John and Jacob Schwing, adjoining the farm of Thos. E. Sater, and in part is owned by the Shaker Society. Here Joseph Sater made his pioneer improvements, and remained until his death.

Joseph died there 17th October, 1833, his widow who was born 16th January, 1764, died 9th April, 1834, in the 91st year of her age.

Most of these records are from the family Bible of Joseph, and are furnished by his grandson, Mr. Moses Enoch Sater of Preston, Ohio, who writes:

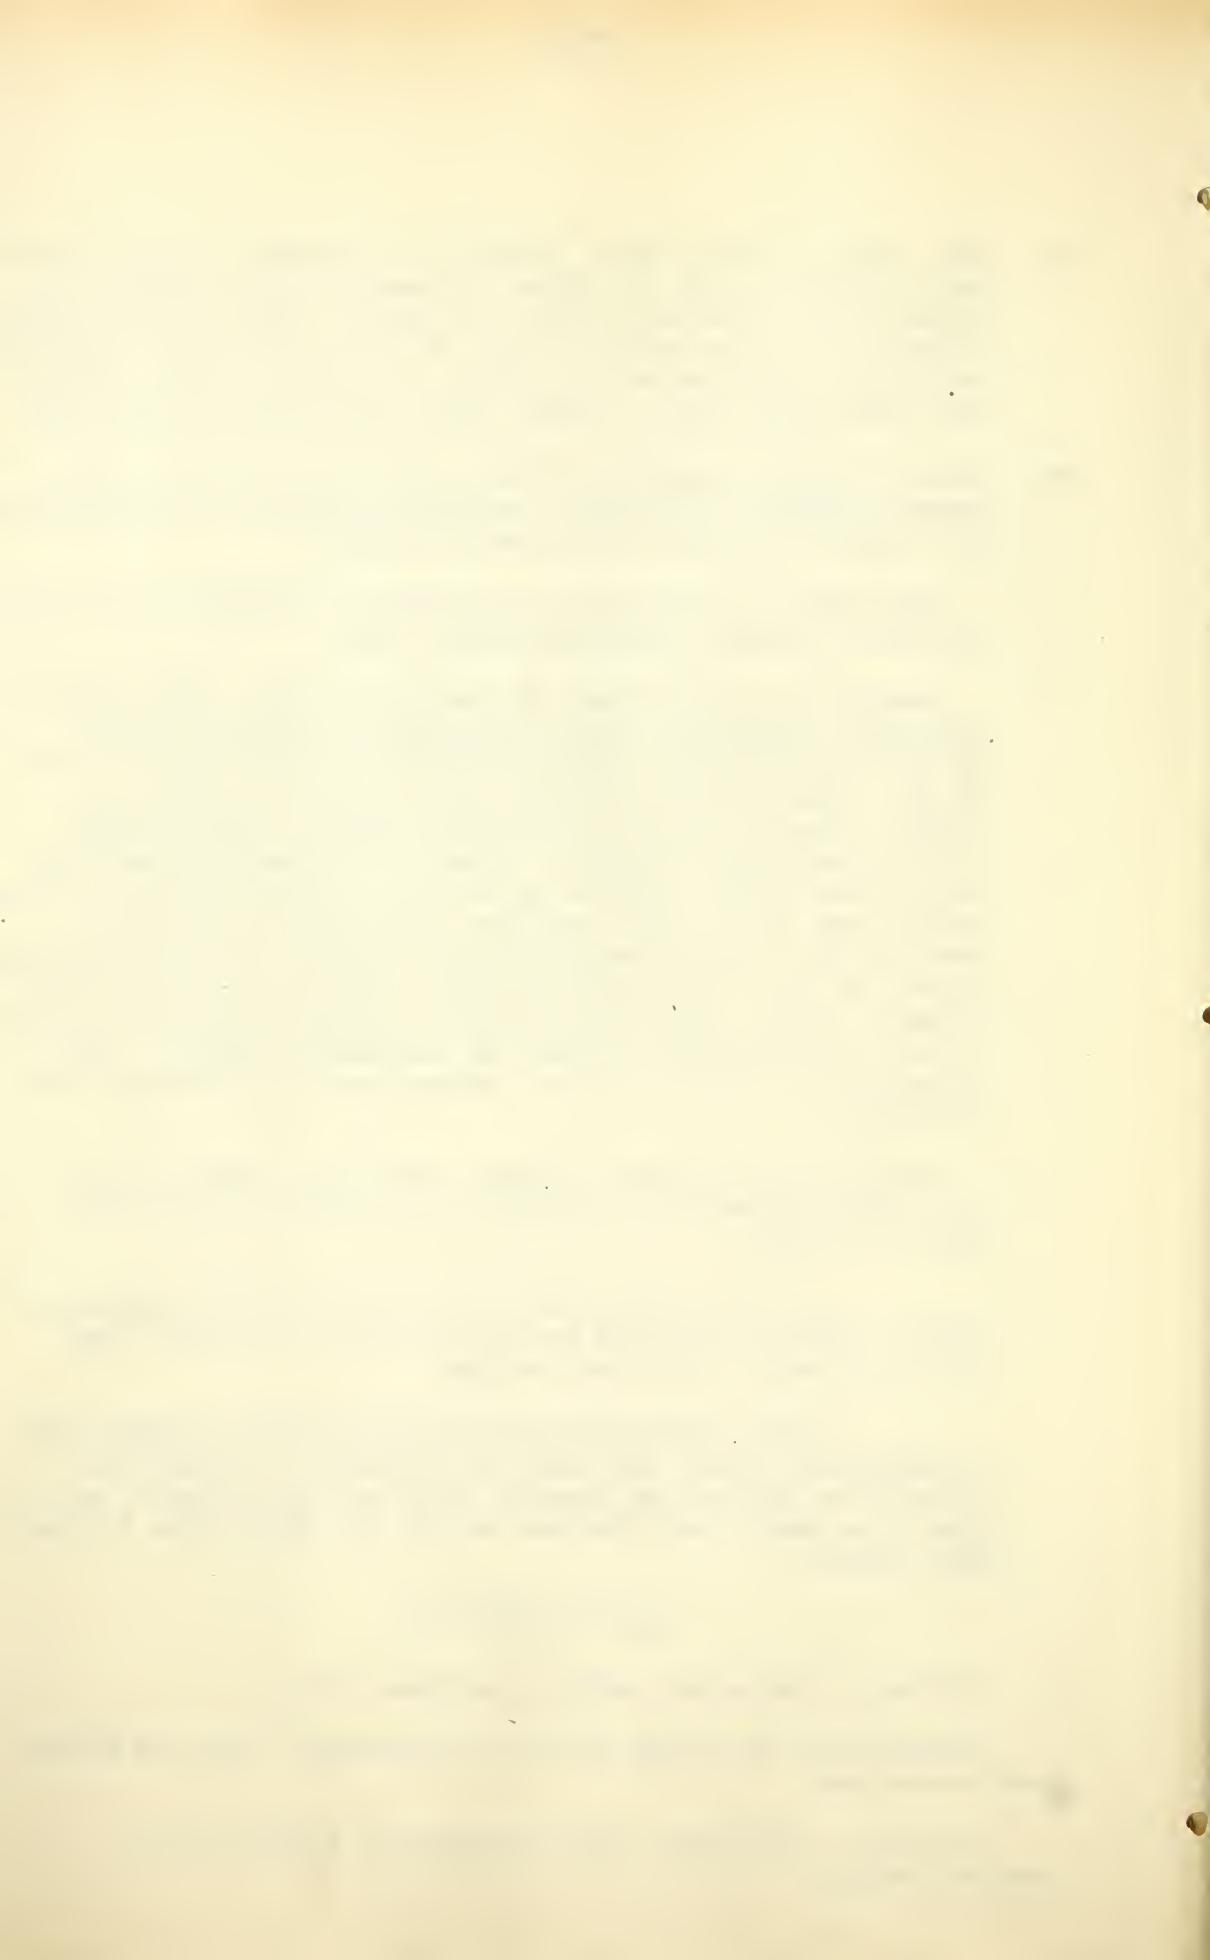

"The above are the first generations of Saters born in Baltimore County, and State of Maryland. *** Grandmother Sater lived with me for several years before her death, and died at my house, and she gave me the old Bible which I prize very highly."

FOURTH GENERATION

I. Children of George and Rachel (Hamilton) Sater.

Charles, the son, lived south of Westminster, Md., and afterwards moves West.

There was a daughter, from whom sprung a branch of the Errymen family.

(These records are very incomplete — no history of the descendants of George Sater could be obtained.)

II. Children of Benjamin and Prudence (Sater) Howard:

1. DISCRETION; born July 29th, 1764; married 21st February, 1782, Thomas Isbell.
2. MARY; born 6th January, 1766.
3. ANN;
4. GEORGE; born 4th February, 1770
5. SAMUEL; born 21st October, 1771.
6. ELIZABETH; born 1st February, 1774.
7. MARGARET; born 27th December, 1776.
8. JESSE; born 10th February, 1778.
9. REBECCA; born 11th March, 1780; married Betsy Walker. Died 21st July, 1825, Wilkes County. His son, George L., born 6th January, 1818.
10. JOHN LIVINGSTON; born 7th April, 1782; married Sophia Negler.
11. NANCY; born 20th February, 1784; married Joseph Callaway. They had one son, Thos. A.
12. MARY; born 1787, died 1788.

JOHN LIVINGSTON, son of James and Frances (Livingston) Isbell, who married Discretion Howard, was born 27th June, 1754 in Albemarle County, Va., and died 27th October, 1819. His widow died 26th June, 1848.

The above is a transcript of the family records as kept by Benjamin Isbell, son of John and Discretion Isbell, in their old family Bible, and is furnished by his son, R. J. Isbell of Coosa Creek, Marion County, Tenn.

Benjamin Isbell wrote over twenty years ago as viz:

"The Isbells, my father's connections, immigrated from England, as I have been informed, and settled in Virginia. My father's given name was Thomas. He married my mother, Discretion Howard in Wilkes County, North Carolina. My wife and I have raised eleven children and those now living are doing well. I have written the foregoing for the satisfaction of my children and grandchildren. I was eighty-four years of age on the 19th of October last, and I have this, the 17th day of February, 1870, written out the foregoing and signed it.
(signed) Benjamin Isbell."

P. S. — My father and mother were members of the Baptist Church at Kings Creek, Wilkes County, North Carolina."

Prudence Sater was the progenitor of a long line of descendants in the states of North Carolina, Mississippi, Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, Texas and Indiana.

III. Children of Henry and Hannah (Stansbury) Eater:

1. HENRY (third); married Fatzey, his cousin, daughter of John Eater. In 1803, they removed to the Wabash.
2. JOHN (unmarried); emigrated to Louisville, Ky., 1799.
3. THOMAS; married Peturan, daughter of John Bond, and lived near Manchester, Baltimore County, Md. They had eight sons and three daughters.
4. GEORGE; died in 1798 in Baltimore County, (no records).
5. JAMES (unmarried); in 1803 emigrated to the Wabash.
6. DORCAS; married Stansbury, and removed to the Wabash in 1803 also.

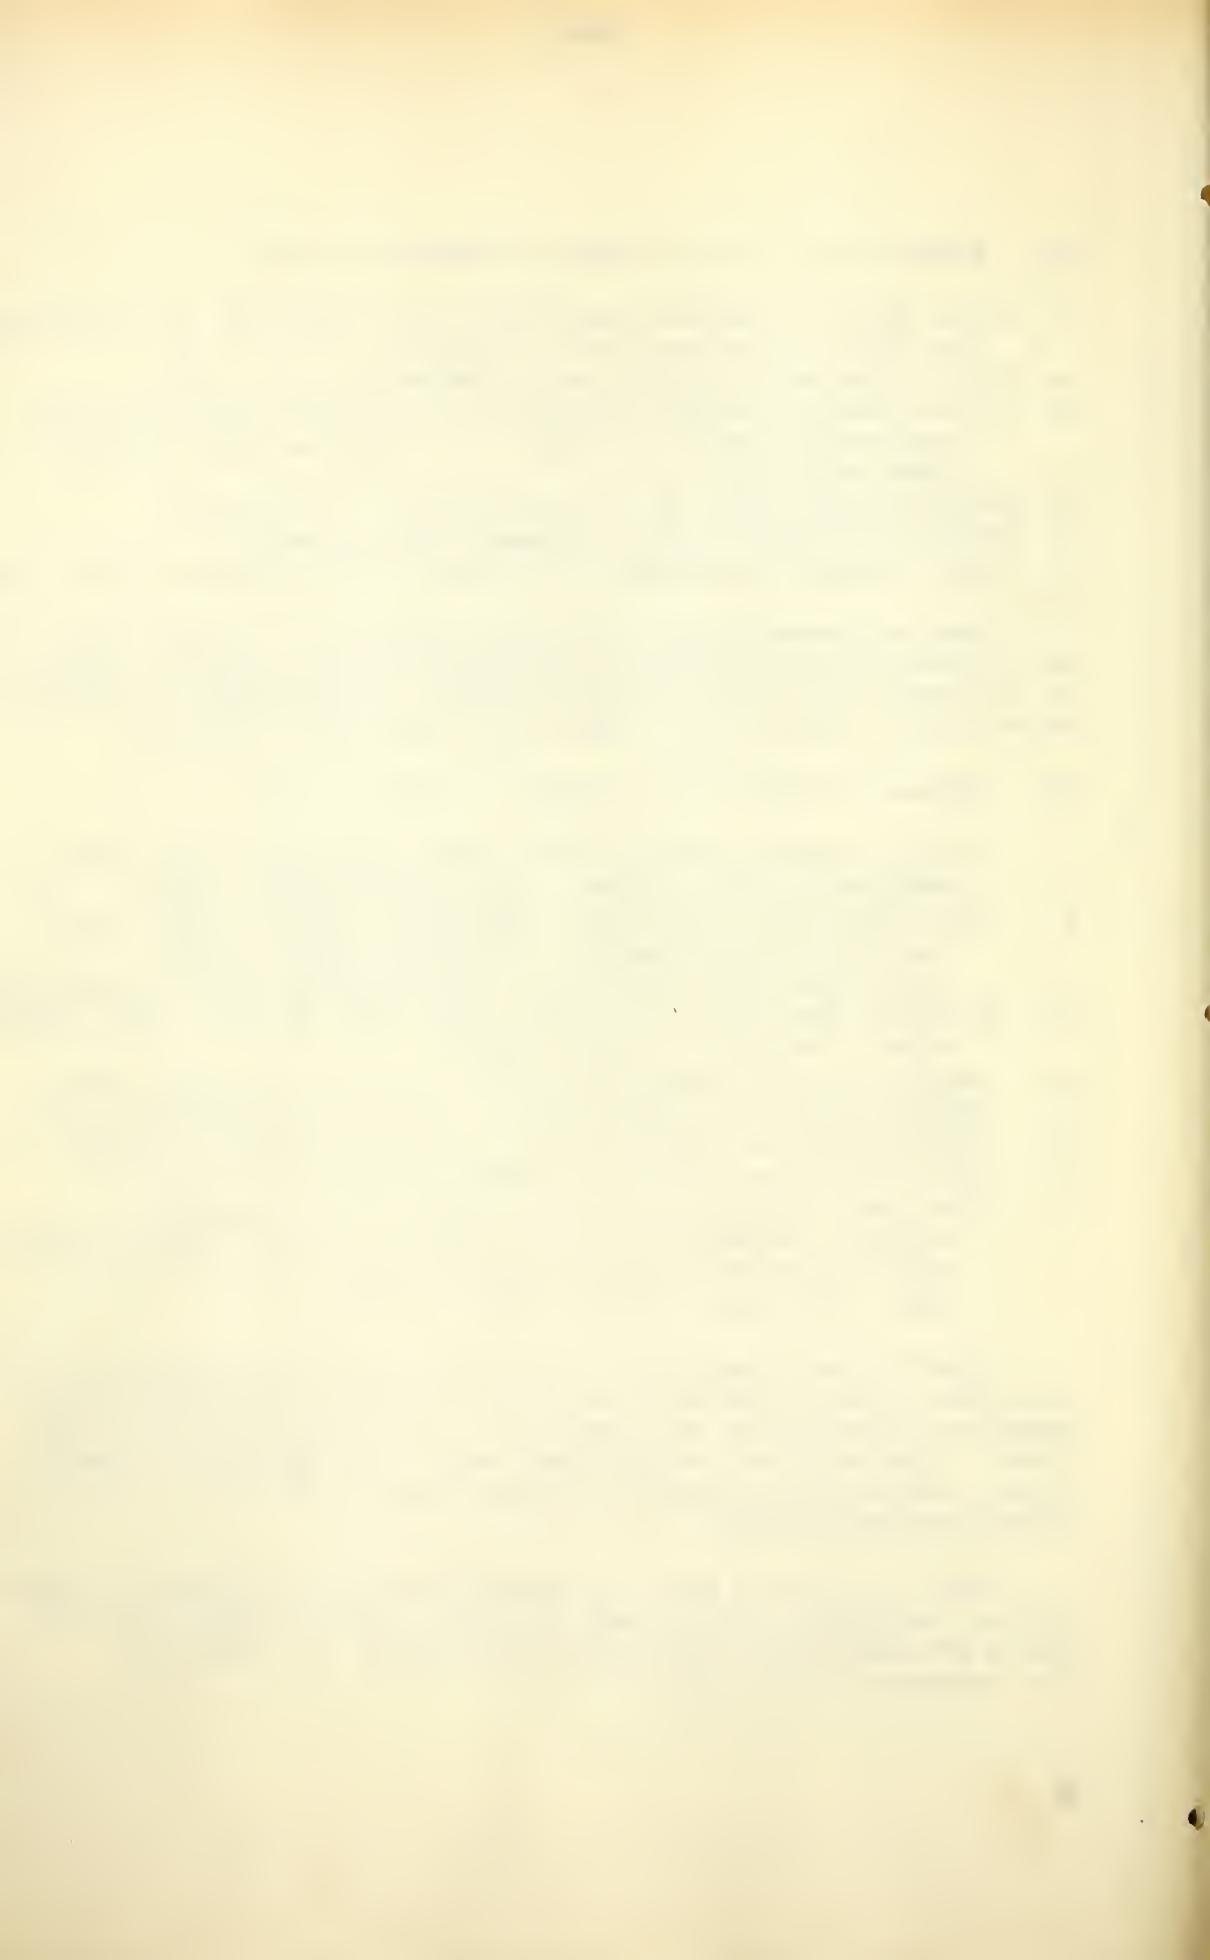

There was practically an exodus of most of this family west in 1803, since which event we have no record of them, with the exception of the family of Thomas and Peturan Eater, whose register is furnished by Mr. John W. Eater of Baltimore City, Md., their grandson.

IV. Children of Thomas and Discretion (Eater) Walker.

1. ELIJAH; born 17th March, 1767; married 3d March, 1794, Malinda, daughter of Elias Magers. Died 17th November, 1796.
2. HENRY; born 25th May, 1769; married 20th August, 1794, Hannah, daughter of Elias Magers. Died 30th January, 1799.
His widow died 10th April, 1821, leaving a son and daughter.
3. PAULINE; born 28th May, 1770; married 6th January, 1798, Edward Belca. She died 21 August, 1840.
4. THOMAS; born 26th September, 1773, and died 1st August, 1781.
5. EBERTA; born 27th August, 1776, and died 1st November, 1786.
6. DOWES; born 26th August, 1777, and died 4th January, 1784.
7. JAMES WALKER; born 11th May, 1788 and died 6th March, 1786.
8. ISADORE; born 24th February, 1786; married 12th May, 1812, Julielma, daughter of Moses Foster of Belair, Harford County, Md., and had two sons and six daughters. Died 31 October, 1868. His widow died 8th November, 1874.

Isaac Walker's native city was Baltimore. His ancestors on both sides came to this country about 1700. In early life he engaged in mercantile pursuits and was associated in business with his brother Joshua. His residence in Baltimore, says Mr. Blodget, his niece, is the present site of Hamilton Easter's dry goods store, Baltimore Street near Light Street.

During the war of 1812, he served in the 39th Regiment of Maryland militia, commanded by Col. Benjamin Fowler, and was engaged in the Battle of North Point. Mr. Walker belonged to the Society of "Old Defenders of Baltimore."

In the spring of 1831 he removed with his family to New York City. One time before this he freed all his slaves.

In Colton's Gazetteer of the U. S. of 1868, Mr. Walker's name is mentioned as the fourth largest taxpayer in Missouri.

During the last war he was a pronounced Union man, and gave one of his hotels in St. Louis, Mo., for government use without receiving any compensation.

In personal appearance he was - very striking, over six feet in height, with an erect form, and ruddy complexion when beyond eighty years of age.

Julieira Foster, his wife, was descended (through her mother), from Mr. Jones of Deer Creek Meadow, an original settler from Bristol, England, who was granted a patent of land from Lord Baltimore 10th of May, 1729.

Her grandfather, Robert Kennedy and Samuel Foster, were in the War of the Revolution, and her father, Moses Foster, served in the 7th Regiment Maryland Troop during the Revolution, and was awarded a tract of land westward of Fort Cumberland, Washington County, pursuant to an act of the General Assembly passed November Session 1786.

9. DAVID WALKER; born Sept., 1786; married 10th March, 1807, (by Rev. Archibald Neely) Catherine Ann, daughter of Thomas Kelly, and died 24th July, 1849. They had five sons and nine daughters.

Sister Frances Walker, like his brother, was in the War of 1812, and belonged to the Maryland Chasseurs. She was baptized 5th May, 1816, and ordained a Baptist Minister in 1826.

In 1842 he was made one of the corporators of the church (founded by his grandfather Foster) by an act of Legislature creating trustees. His wife was born 1st October, 1788, and died 9th October, 1846.

10. DAVID; born 11th August, 1791; married 31st March, 1833 Mrs. Cox of Washington County, Mississippi, (where he resided many years). He died 30th April, 1846.

11. JOSEPH; born 20th September, 1793; married 23d February, 1823, Mary Abbott. She died 1st July, 1845, having had eight sons and nine daughters. He married again 13th May, 1846, Elizabeth, daughter of John Stouffer, and died 26th August, 1851.

Joshua Walker was a prominent merchant of Baltimore and possessed a great deal of property. He formerly owned the Carleton House, corner of Leonard street and Broadway, N. Y. City, where he resided. He also had a large plantation and country seat on the James River, near Richmond, Virginia.

The family register of Thomas Walker is in the possession of his grandson, Mr. Isaac H. Walker, of this city, and was received from the late Patrick Henry Walker, son of Noah Walker of Baltimore many years ago.

Mr. Sater Thomas Walker of Baltimore, son of the Rev. Sater Thomas Walker, has also preserved the "Walker" family records.

V. Children of John Sater:

There were several sons and one daughter, Patsey, who married her cousin Henry, eldest son of Henry and Hannah Sater.

No record of this family in North Carolina, after their removal.

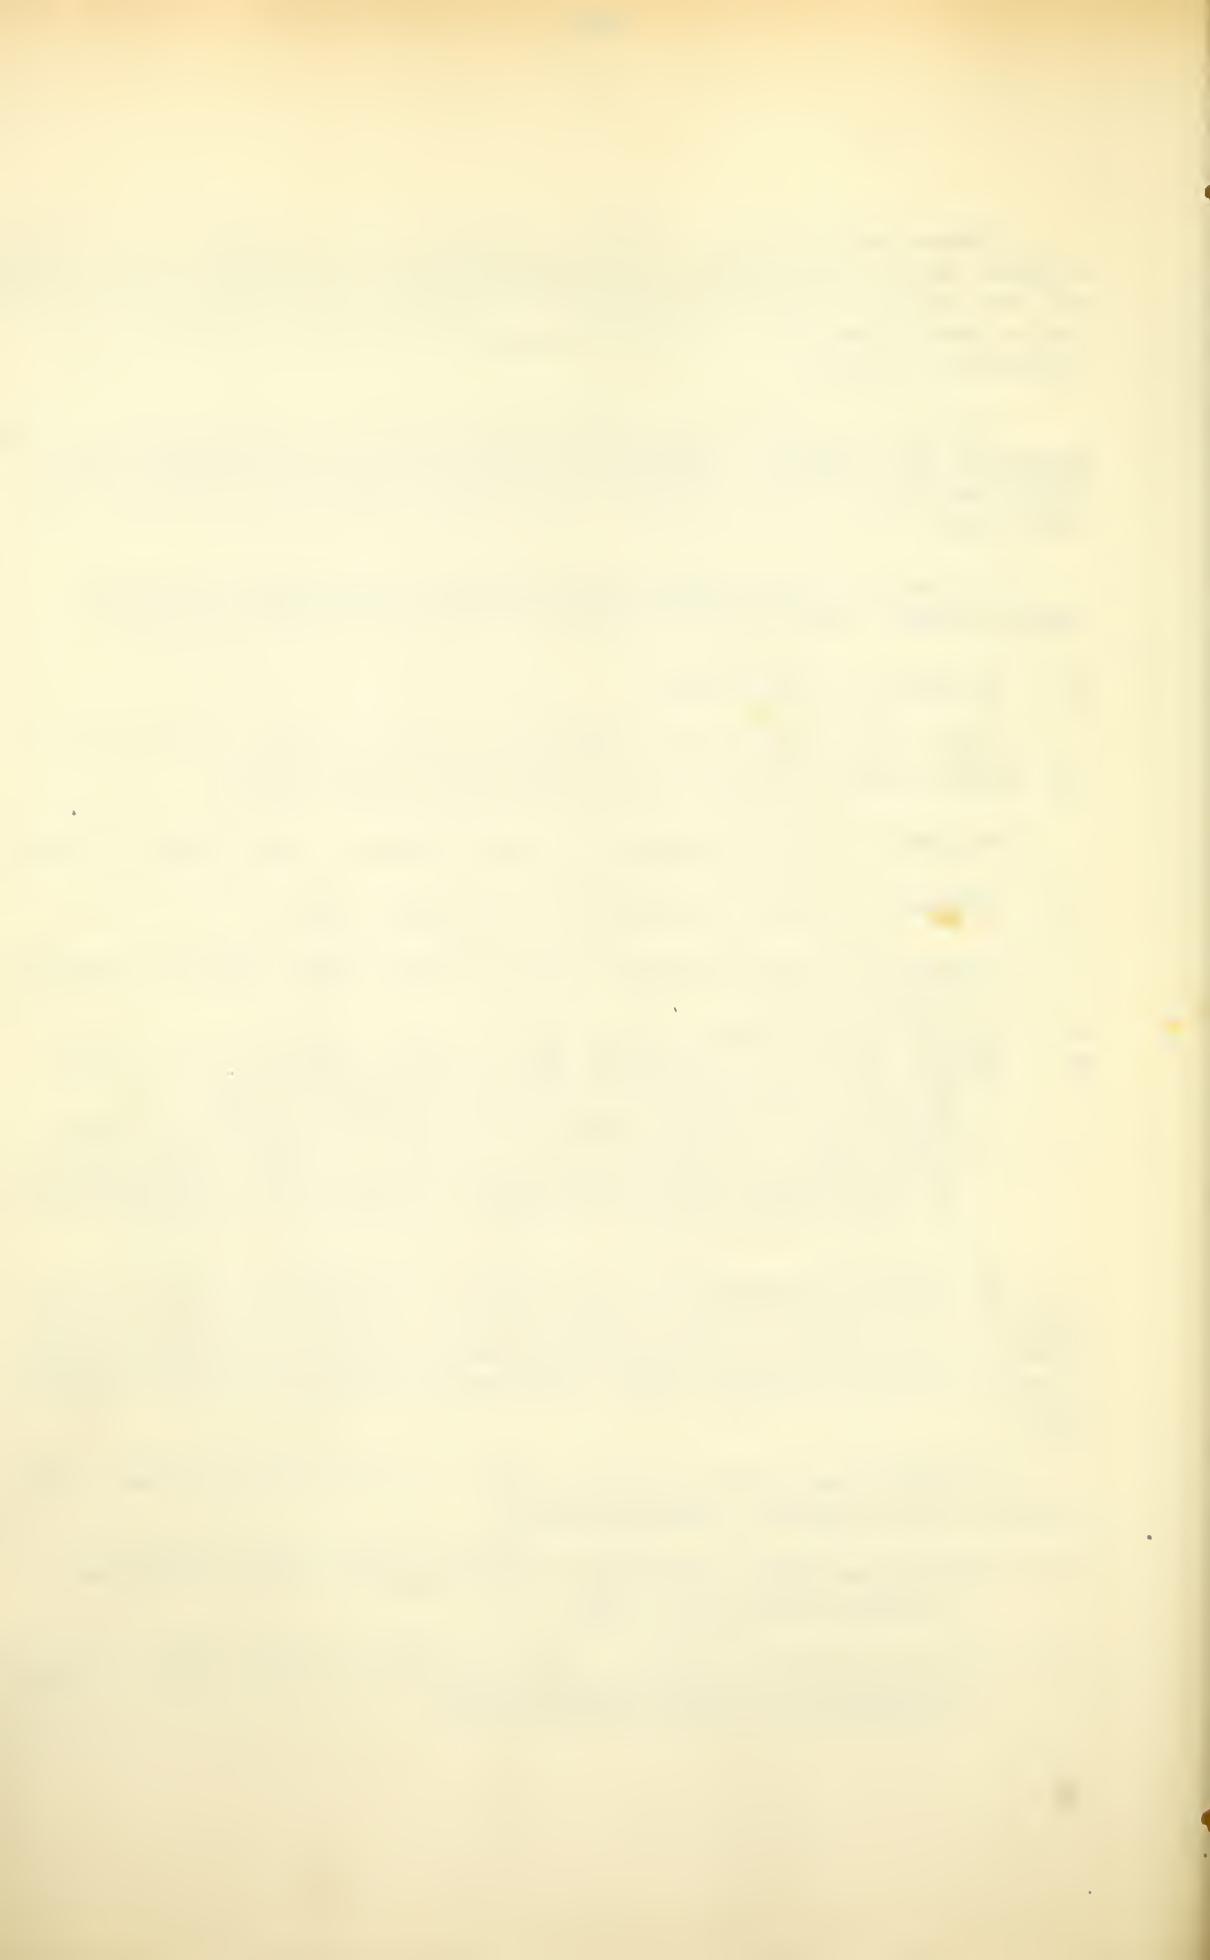

VI. Children of Joseph and Hannah (Levering) Sater:

1. JAMES; born 13th January, 1786; married Henry Sater. Died 6th August, 1812.
2. MARY; born 31st May, 1788; died 3d April, 1810.
3. JOHN; born 20th February, 1791; married 27th January, 1820, Elizabeth Pottenger; he died 2d September, 1834.
4. WILLIAM; born 17th September, 1793; married September, 1813, Nancy Jones, daughter of John Jones, a pioneer from Maryland, to the valley of the Whitewater in 1809, and a descendant of Mr. Jones, the original settler from Bristol, England.

Mr. Sater, according to the "History of Hamilton County, Ohio," occupied a portion of the old homestead in Crosby township, Hamilton County, Ohio, and after his father's death, built the brick mansion in which his son (Thomas Knobell) resides, and died there 30th January, 1849.

His widow was born 31 August, 1790, and died 3d September, 1871, and had five sons and three daughters.

5. DOROTHY; born 31st of October, 1796; married Henry Tilbourne; she died 15th July, 1839.
6. MARY; born 12th January, 1801; married 3d June, 1824, Eleanor Pottenger; he died October, 1865.

7. MARY ANN DIVERIN; born 8th March, 1805; married February, 1825, Stout Atherton; she died 27th April, 1835.

FIFTH GENERATION

I. Children of Thomas and Discretion (Howard) Isbell.

1. PRUDENCE; born 5th September, 1783; married Carleton.
2. BENJAMIN; born 19th October, 1785; married 17th February, 1818, Martha Parkes in Wilkes Co., N. C., who was born 10th April, 1793. He died 23d July, 1870. His widow died 15th July, 1840.
3. JOHN; born 11th February, 1788; died 27th October, 1825; no issue.
4. FRANCES; born 2d July, 1791; married Micajah Ferguson.
5. LIVINGSTON; born 18th April, 1794; married Adonis; had three sons.
6. ELIZABETH; born 18th November, 1796; married Mirron Ferguson.
7. MARY; born 27th January, 1800; married Lucinda Petty, and had 1 son and 2 daughters. Died 29th November, 1865. Lucinda died May 20th, 1886.
8. RALPH; born 31st December, 1803; married Joseph Tucker.
9. JAMES; born 14th September, 1806; married 19th March, 1833, Natalia, daughter of Obert and Margaret Houston, of Knox Co., Tenn. They had two sons and three daughters. He died Dec. 6th, 1871.

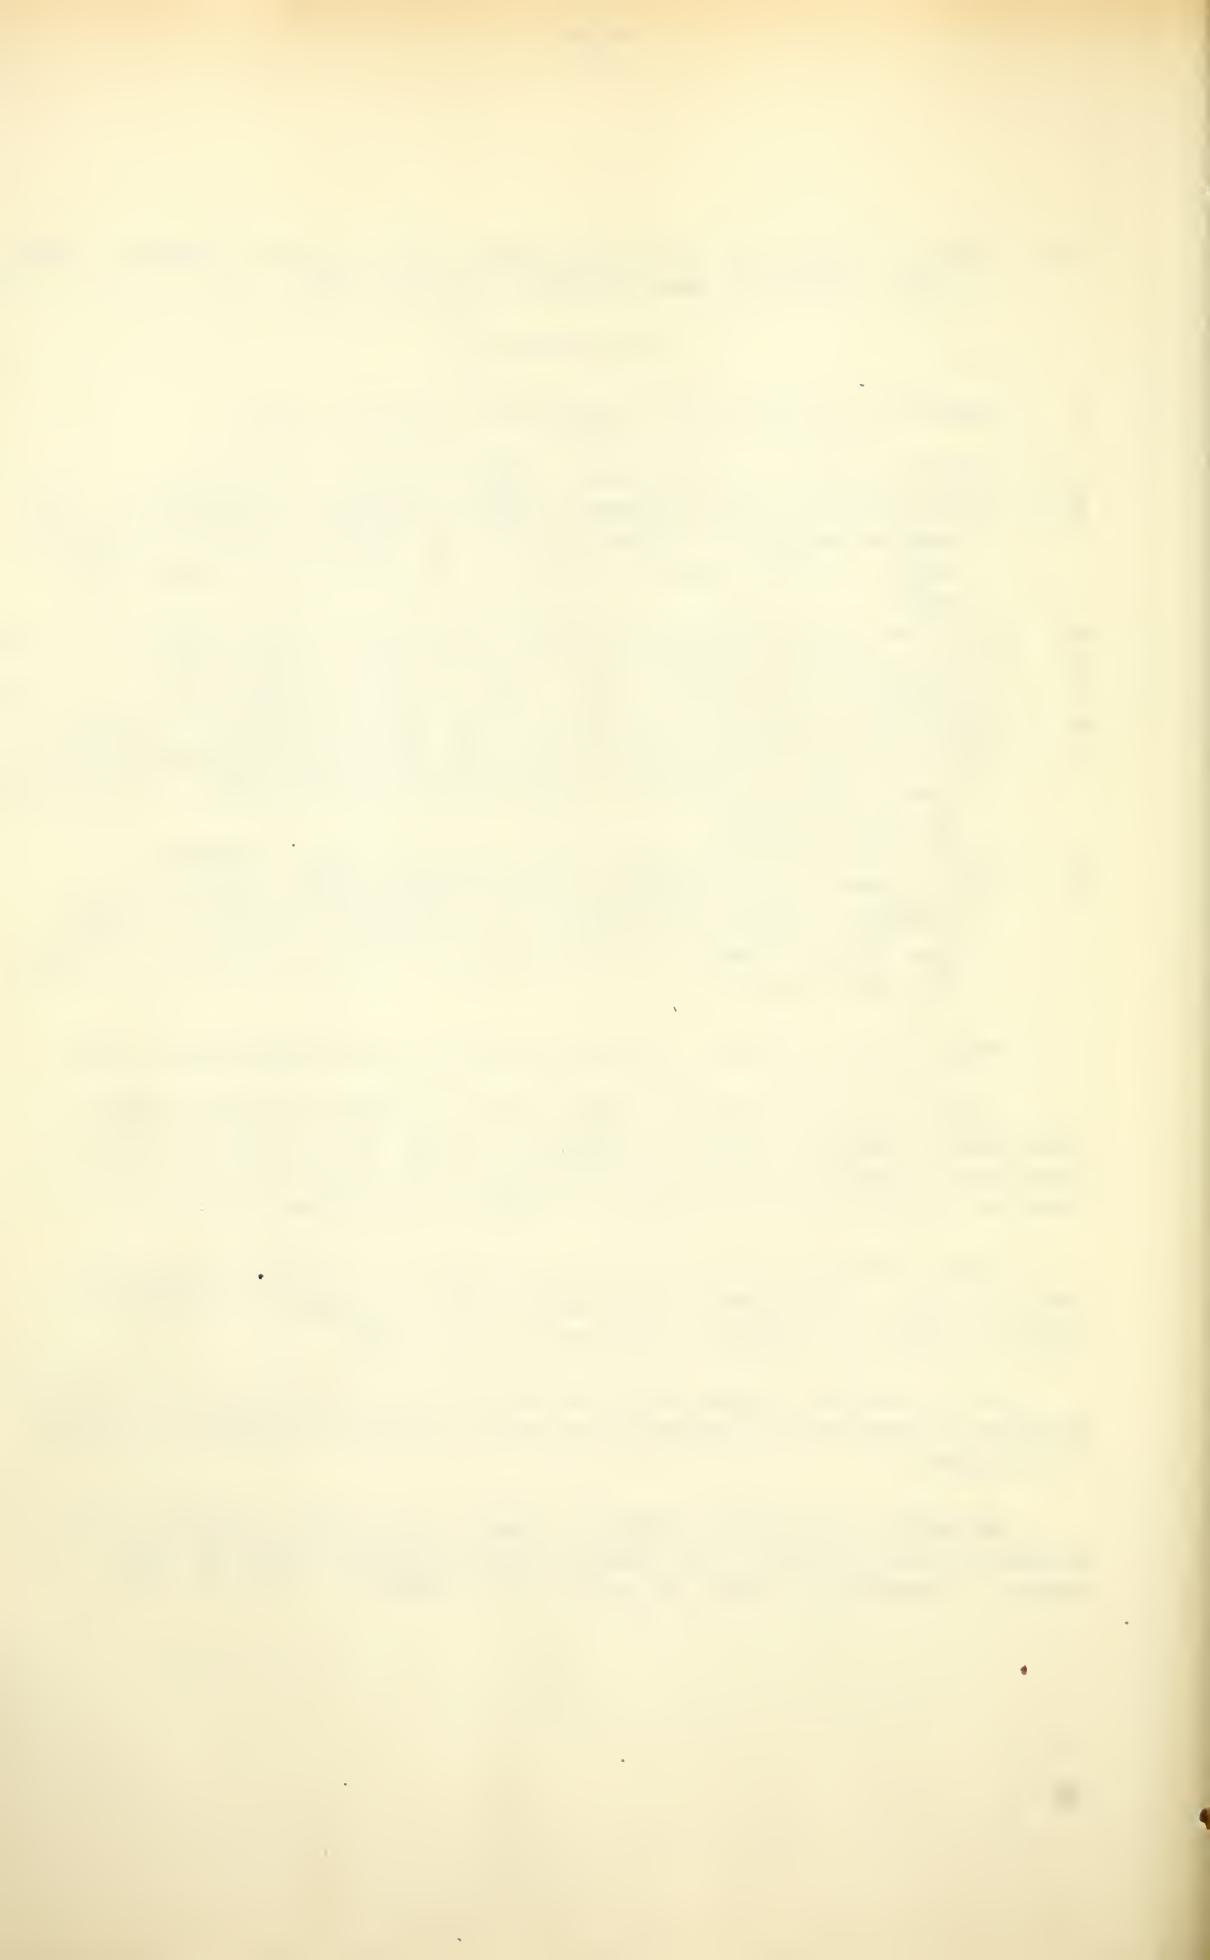

Mrs. Isbell served five years during the Revolutionary War.

(The above is from the family Bible of Major James Isbell of Talladega, Alabama, now in possession of his son-in-law, W. A. Armstrong, president of First National Bank, Selma, Ala., and from records furnished by Mr. James A. Isbell, Blackstone, S. C.)

Thomas Isbell, Jr., remained on the old homestead in Wilkes County, N. C. Livingston and James went to Alabama, where the latter engaged in banking business at Talladega.

Mary (Isbell) Tucker settled near Cleveland, Tenn., and the two sisters Frances and Elizabeth, who both married Fergusons, removed to Indiana.

Benjamin and Martha (Parkes) Isbell had eleven children, the eldest of whom, Mrs. H. A. Turnley, has furnished most of the register relating to this branch of the family.

II. Children of George Doward:

1. JOHN W.; who lived near Athens, Tenn., had five sons and four daughters.
2. CORNELIUS; who lived on the Tellico river, Monroe Co., Tenn., had two sons and two daughters.
3. FRED J. I.; who married Fanny Hall, and died leaving two sons and one daughter.
4. BURF W.; who lived in Blount Co., Tenn., married Fanny, his brother's widow, and had three sons and three daughters.
5. WALTER A.; married Martha Hardin, and lived in Monroe and Polk Counties, Tenn. Had four sons and one daughter.
6. JAMESON; lived first on the Tennessee river in Monroe County; but afterwards in Fork Creek Valley where he died. Had sons and daughters.
7. ELVIRA; married Jack Lattimore, and settled on the Tennessee river. Died two years ago. Had two sons and two daughters.
8. MARCISSA; married Henry, and settled and died in Blount County, Tenn., leaving four sons and one daughter.

III. Children of Cornelius and Delphine (Dowler) Doward:

1. HILLIAH; married Eliza Steed, and lived in Athens, Tenn. Had one son and seven daughters.
2. BENJAMIN; married Miss Wood
3. WALTER;
4. PRUDENCE;
5. JOHN;
6. ELIASERA;
7. CORNELIUS;

Cornelius and Delphine Doward lived in Bradley Co. near Cleveland, Tenn.

He owned and resided for many years at "Sumberton," a county seat of 500 acres in the suburbs of Baltimore, near Pikesville, on the Green Spring Valley road. He was engaged in business at the corner of Baltimore and Grant streets, Baltimore, Md. The front of his store was adorned with the celebrated marble statue of Washington, presented to the city and now in Druid Hill Park, Baltimore.

2. DR. CAG; married Michael Caughey, nephew of Patrick. He had four children.

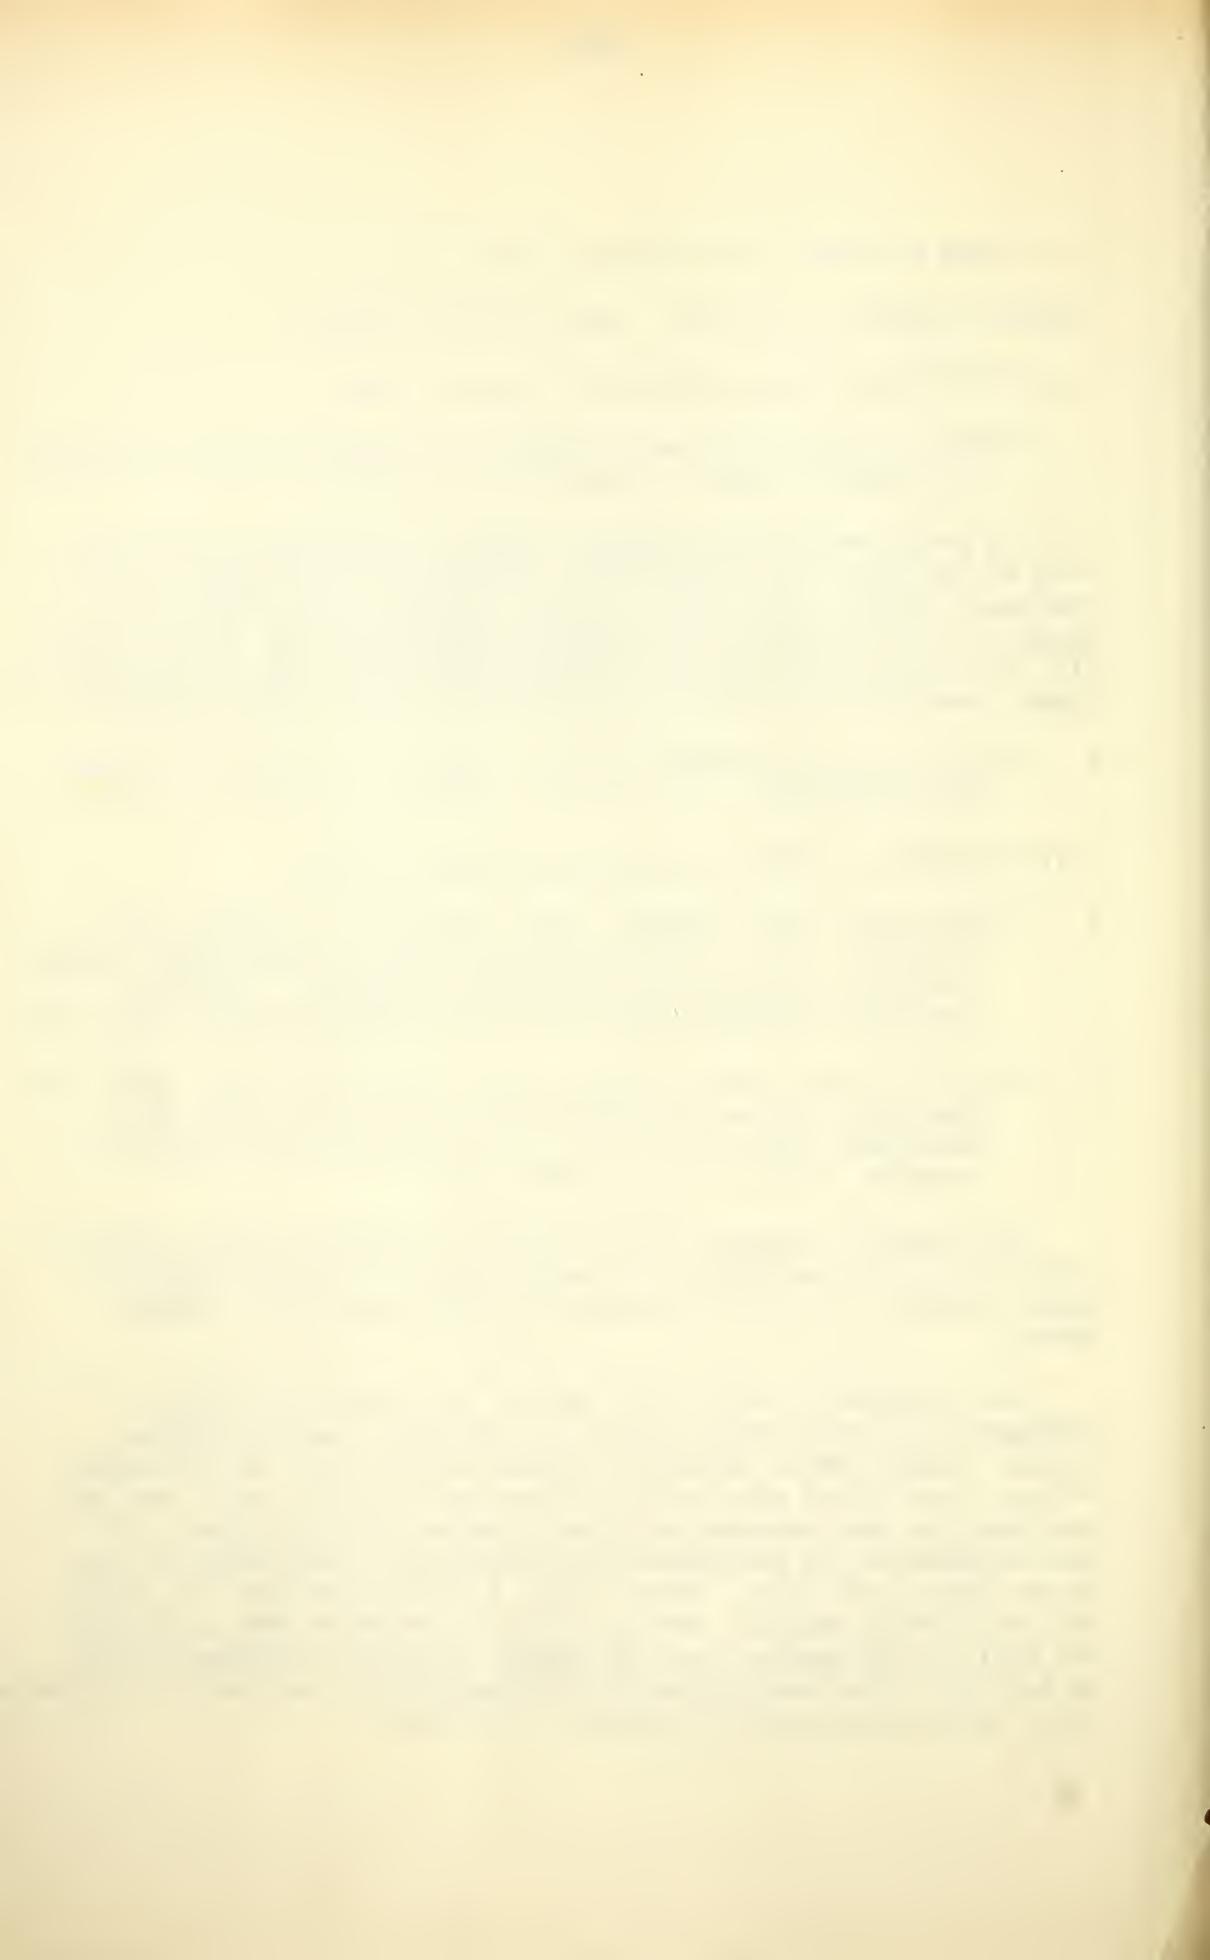

VII. Children of Isaac and Gulieina (Foster) Walker.

1. LOUISA; born 21st February, 1813, married 7th August, 1831, George J. Bull of Baltimore and died 12th May, 1836, leaving two sons. She lived and died in Baltimore. After her death her husband moved to New York where he died April 1871.

2. JULIA ANN; born 16th October, 1814; married 7th July, 1834, by the Rev. Archibald MacLay of New York City, to his son Archibald MacLay, Jr., A. D., of New York; she died 27th October, 1868. She had five sons.

Dr. Archibald MacLay, Jr., was born in New York City, 2d of March, 1812, and resided in his native city, practicing medicine until his death the 1st of November, 1872, where he was widely known.

Rev. Archibald MacLay, his father, was born at Milearn, Scotland, 14th May, 1776, the son of Archibald and Jean Thomas MacLay. The paternal homestead, known as Green End, on the banks of Loch Lomond, was occupied by his ancestors for a great many generations, as they belonged to a very ancient Highland clan. He well remembered the character "Old Mortality," made famous by Sir Walter Scott, and said: "When a boy, I have often seen Old Mortality, who always made his home at my mother's house when he visited our part of the country, and the deeply thrilling incidents which he told me of the martyrs and the sufferings they endured for Christ's sake, left a permanent impression on my mind."

It is related of Dr. Melby's paternal grandmother, who was a woman of strong character, that by her address and knowledge of Gaelic, she saved her native village from pillage and destruction.

Graduating from the University of Edinburgh, he married Mary, daughter of Mr. Brown of Blantyre, and sailed for America 20th October, 1853.

From 1853 to 1857 he occupied the pulpit of the Mulberry Street Baptist Church, New York City, and continued to preach up to a short time of his death, which took place 2d May, 1860.

From the records of a meeting held in Baltimore, 27th October, 1856, for the organization of the "American Baptist Union Association," including the older Church, is the following: Rev. Archibald Melby of New York, present by request.

"He belonged to a race of ministers who may be justly regarded as the pioneers of the Baptist denomination in this country, and whose names are associated with the origin and progress of the various societies now permanently established."

3. MELBY; born 20th of August, 1816, married at Davenport Bluffs, Iowa, 1st June 1871, Mary Charlotte, daughter of Mr. Edward J. and Mary Brown Austin Gillies; and died 2nd November, 1882. They had four sons and one daughter.

4. MARY DIXON; born 25th March, 1818; married 30th September, 1840, Andrew Gilbert Speir of New York City. She had three sons and four daughters, and died 6th of February, 1875.

Gilbert Andrew Speir, son of Archibald and Margaret Speir, was born at Colleton Springs, Sumter Co., S. C., 14th September, 1812, and graduated from Yale College in 1832. He was a citizen to the U. S. Bar, 1839, and practiced law until November, 1875, when he was elected Judge of the Superior Court, N. Y. City, and served on the bench until December, 1881. He was Vice-president of the Century Club, and trustee of Manhattan Savings Institution, College of Physicians, etc. deceased 2d May, 1884.

5. ANN MELBY; born 6th of July, 1823; married November, 1847, William L. Gentry of New York. She has had one son and one daughter.

W. L. Gentry was born at Rivington near York, England, January 11th, 1806. He was a merchant and importer in N. Y. City for many years, with John Tortimer, the first being Tortimer & Gentry.

Mr. Sawtry was one of the early residents at Long Branch, N. J., and was identified with the improvement and development of that city. He occupied the originally house he General Grant, which he afterwards sold to collector Murphy. Deceased 16th October, 1893.

6. MARY SAWTRY; born 1st of March, 1823; married 18th February, 1843, Peter L. Revius of New York City, and has four sons and three daughters. She died 7th of June, 1873.

Peter L. Revius was born 1st October, 1812, and descended from Alexander Revius, who was a "mechanic" or engineer of New York in 1685.

His father, Peter L., held the same office in 1800. Peter L. Jr., was associated with his father in business in the same store, No. 11 Beekman Street, where his father had commenced in 1810, and continued until his death, 8th of July, 1883.

7. ALICE JENKINS; born 6th of May, 1828; married January, 1848, Silvanus F. Jenkins of New York City. She has two sons and one daughter.

Silvanus F. Jenkins was born in New York, 20th March, 1817, and had been engaged in business in his native city all his life. Is treasurer of the Union's Sons for Savings, which position he has filled for many years.

8. ISAMO DURY; born in New York City 2nd of June, 1831; married 10th December, 1856, Corneliea daughter of William H. Tracy of New York. They have one son.

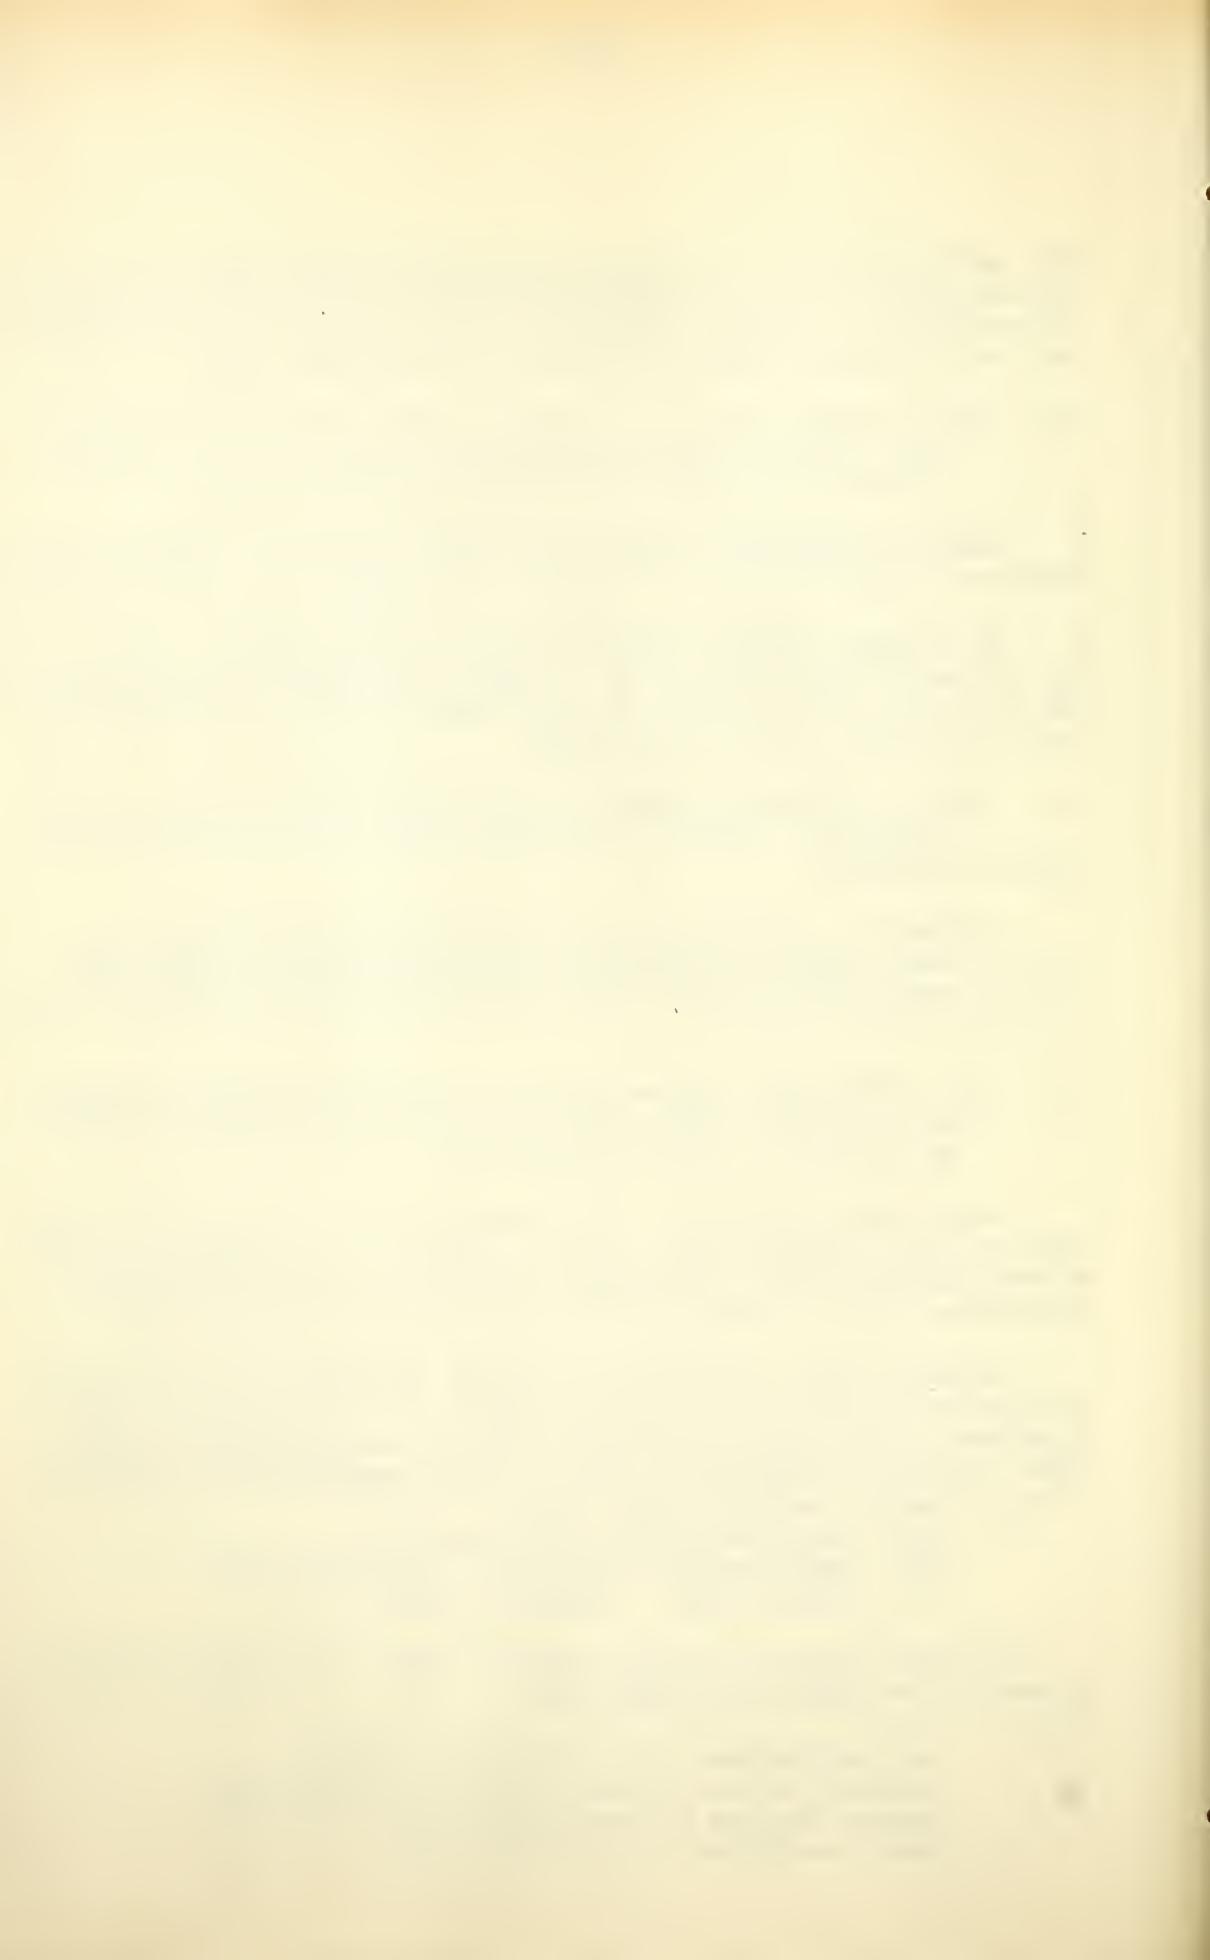

Isamo Dury Miller was Vice-president of the "American Insurance Co." for several years, and is cashier of the Leather Manufacturers National Bank of New York. He belongs to the Sons of the Revolution, and is a master of the "Society of the War of 1812."

Cornelia Tracy, his wife, is a direct descendant of two of the original pilgrim fathers who came over in the first voyage of the Mayflower, John Howland and Edward Tilley, who landed at Plymouth Rock. They also signed the first form of government ever drawn up in this country, and recorded at viii.:

13. John Howland (in Carver's family)
14. Edward Tilley (with wife, died before the end of March. Father in family - 4.

She also traces her lineage back to Col. John Cornet, who was famous in the French and Indian War.

The instructions for Major Benjamin Church, Commander of the forces raised for his majesty's service against the French and Indian enemy and rebels concludes with the following:

"You are to advise, as you can have occasion, with Captain John Cornell, who accompanied you in this expedition, and is to take your command in case of your death. A copy of these instructions you are to leave with him, and to give me an account from time to time of your proceedings." - Boston, Aug. 12, 1806. - William Bentzon.

13. THOMAS ANN; born 16th January, 1828; died October 24th, 1883.
14. FATHER THOMAS; born 13th May, 1831; married 11th June, 1849, Mary J. Kirby.

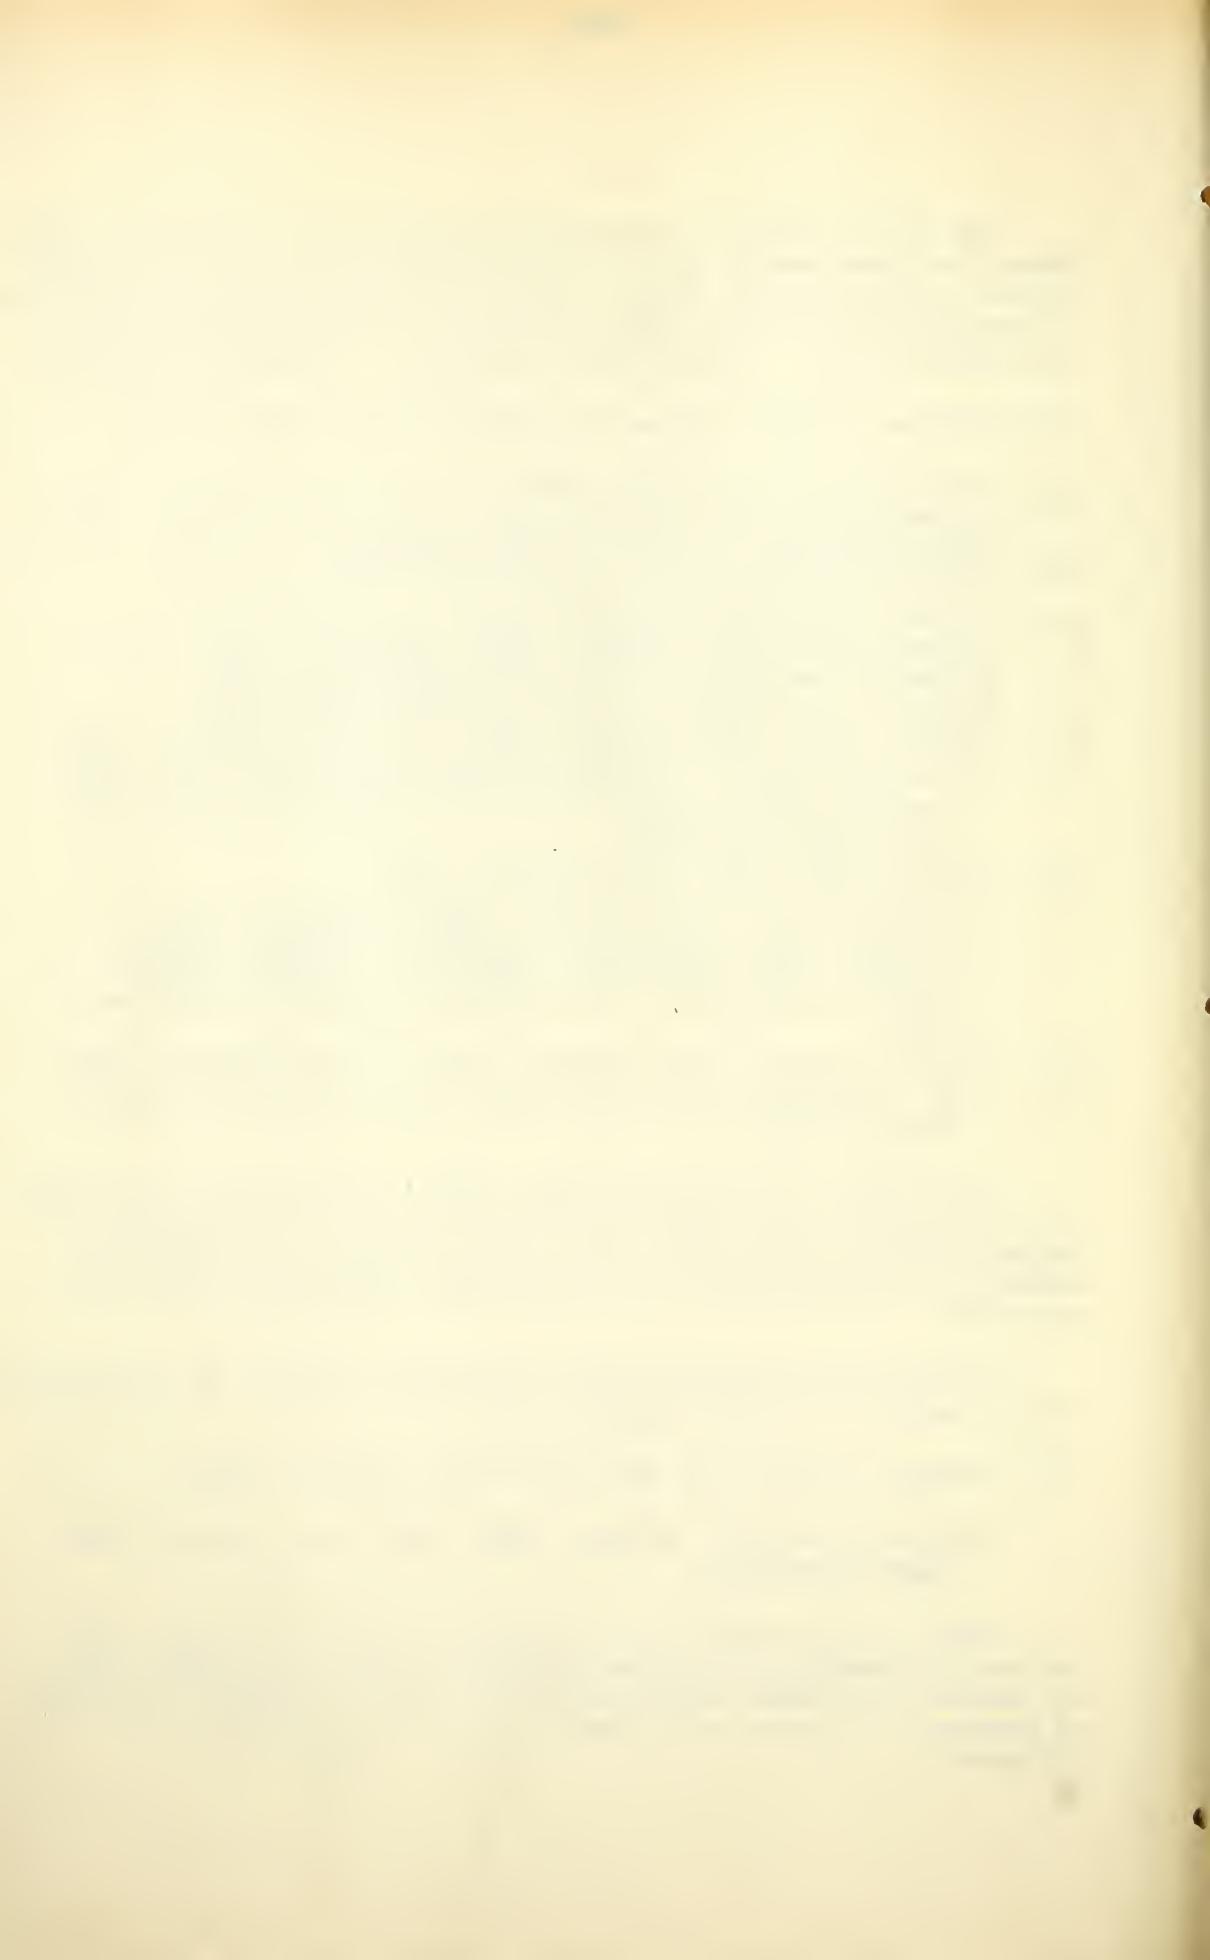

This record is furnished by Mr. Father Thomas Walker, a resident of Baltimore, Md., who served during the Civil War in the First Maryland Veteran Volunteers, Col. John J. Kenly, 2d Division, 2d Brigade, 3d Army Corps, and was honorably discharged after Lee's surrender.

He was in two battles before Antietam, and died at the battle of the Wilderness . . . , and Fletcher's Run.

IX. Children of Josia and Mary Elizabeth (Leveng) Walker.

1. JULIA; born 23d October, 1823; married 4th October, 1842, Eugene Levering.

Eugene Levering was born in Baltimore, 24th of October, 1813, and was the twelfth of fourteen children, and in the direct line of descent from Josier Levering, born in 1603, a refugee in Germany on account of the wars and persecutions of the Huguenots.

The "Levering Genealogy" gives Mr. Levering's lineage as viz.:

Parents:- Peter, born 4th February, 1766; married Hannah Wilson.

Grandparents:- Knock, born 21st February, 1742; married Hannah Minter.

Great grandparents:- William, born August, 1705; married Hannah Mardin.

Great Great grandparents:- William, born 4th May, 1677, married Catherine.

Great Great Great grandparents:- Wmard, born 1646; married Marialena Cook.

Wmard was one of the pioneer settlers of Germantown, Philadelphia Co., Pa., who came to America in 1688, and brought his son William, aged 8, with him. He was naturalized "on the 7th of the 31 month, 1691."

The Pennsylvania Gazette of February 1st, 1741, contains the following notice of his death:

"Last week died not far from this city, Mr. Richard Levering, aged 109."

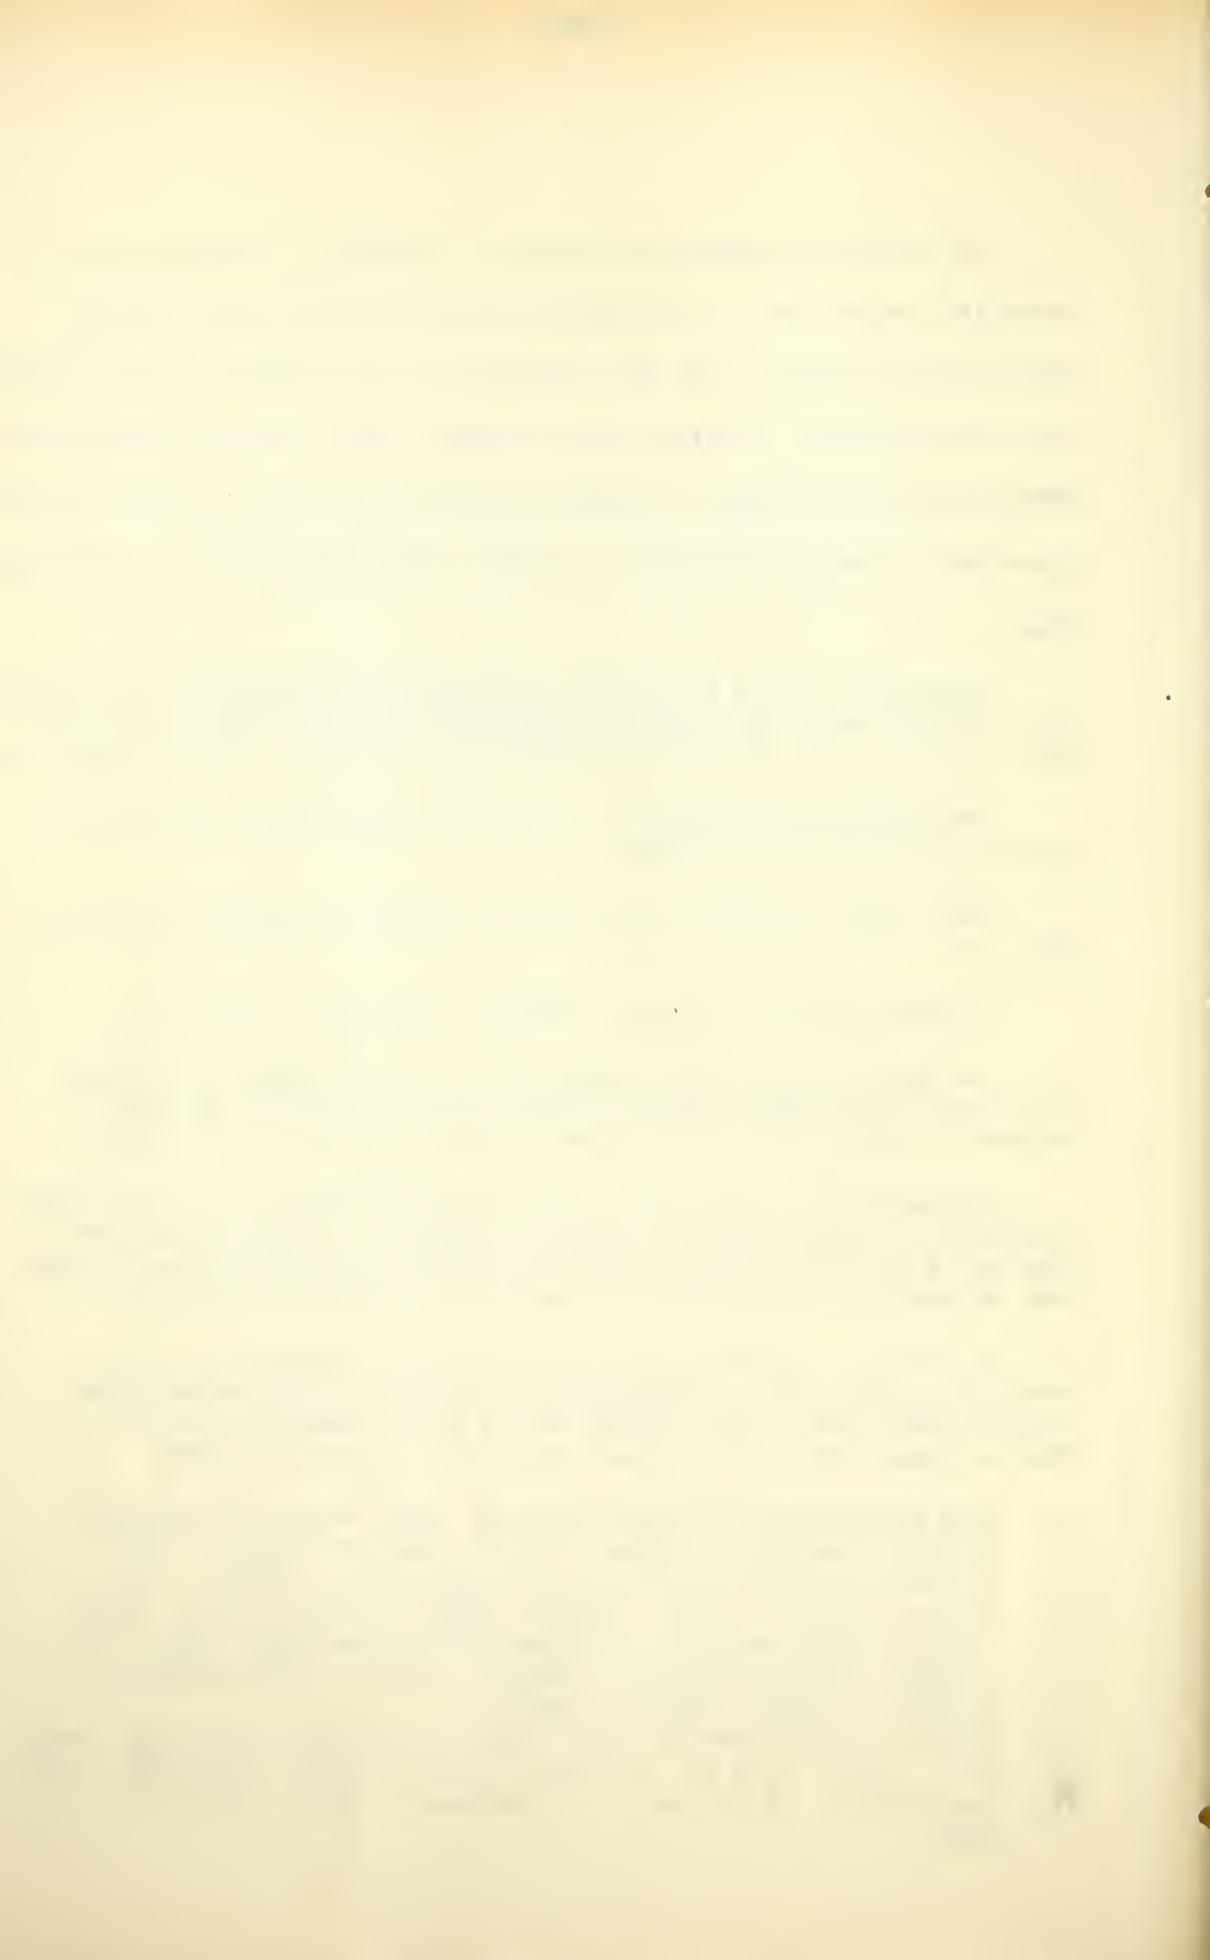

It has since been proved, however, that he was only 57.

Mr. Levering, of the 3d generation, who belonged in Germantown, built the first school house there, and gave the land for that purpose. He also built and owned the first hotel in that place.

The Leverings are a well known Baltimore family, who have been prominent in mercantile and financial circles for over a century. They are strongly identified with the Baptist denominations, having been members of that church for several successive generations.

Mr. Eugene Levering was for a long time treasurer of the Maryland Baptist Union Association, of which his father was one of the organizers, and a member of the first executive board. He died in June, 1870, having had a family of twelve children.

Of this family, Eliza Ann, resided two and a half miles north of St. Pleasant, Township of Springfield. Sarah lived in Morgan township, Butler County, and Willie lived near her. Joseph, who resided on his farm, Crosby township, near his brother, Thomas A., was elected township treasurer in 1860, and served eleven years. Has served as school trustee for over twenty-five years, and held various positions as township trustee and assessor, county commissioner, etc., and is noted for his integrity and high character. Was elected jailor of his town: "I would with sincerity join in the recognition proposed of the faithful and valuable public service of Mr. Joseph later, whose name is identified in this community with vigilance and integrity in the discharge of the duties of a position of responsibility," said the late Judge Longworth said: "It was a letter to have written on Mr. later's record, as it was now written, than on the tomb, the tribute to his honesty and capability."

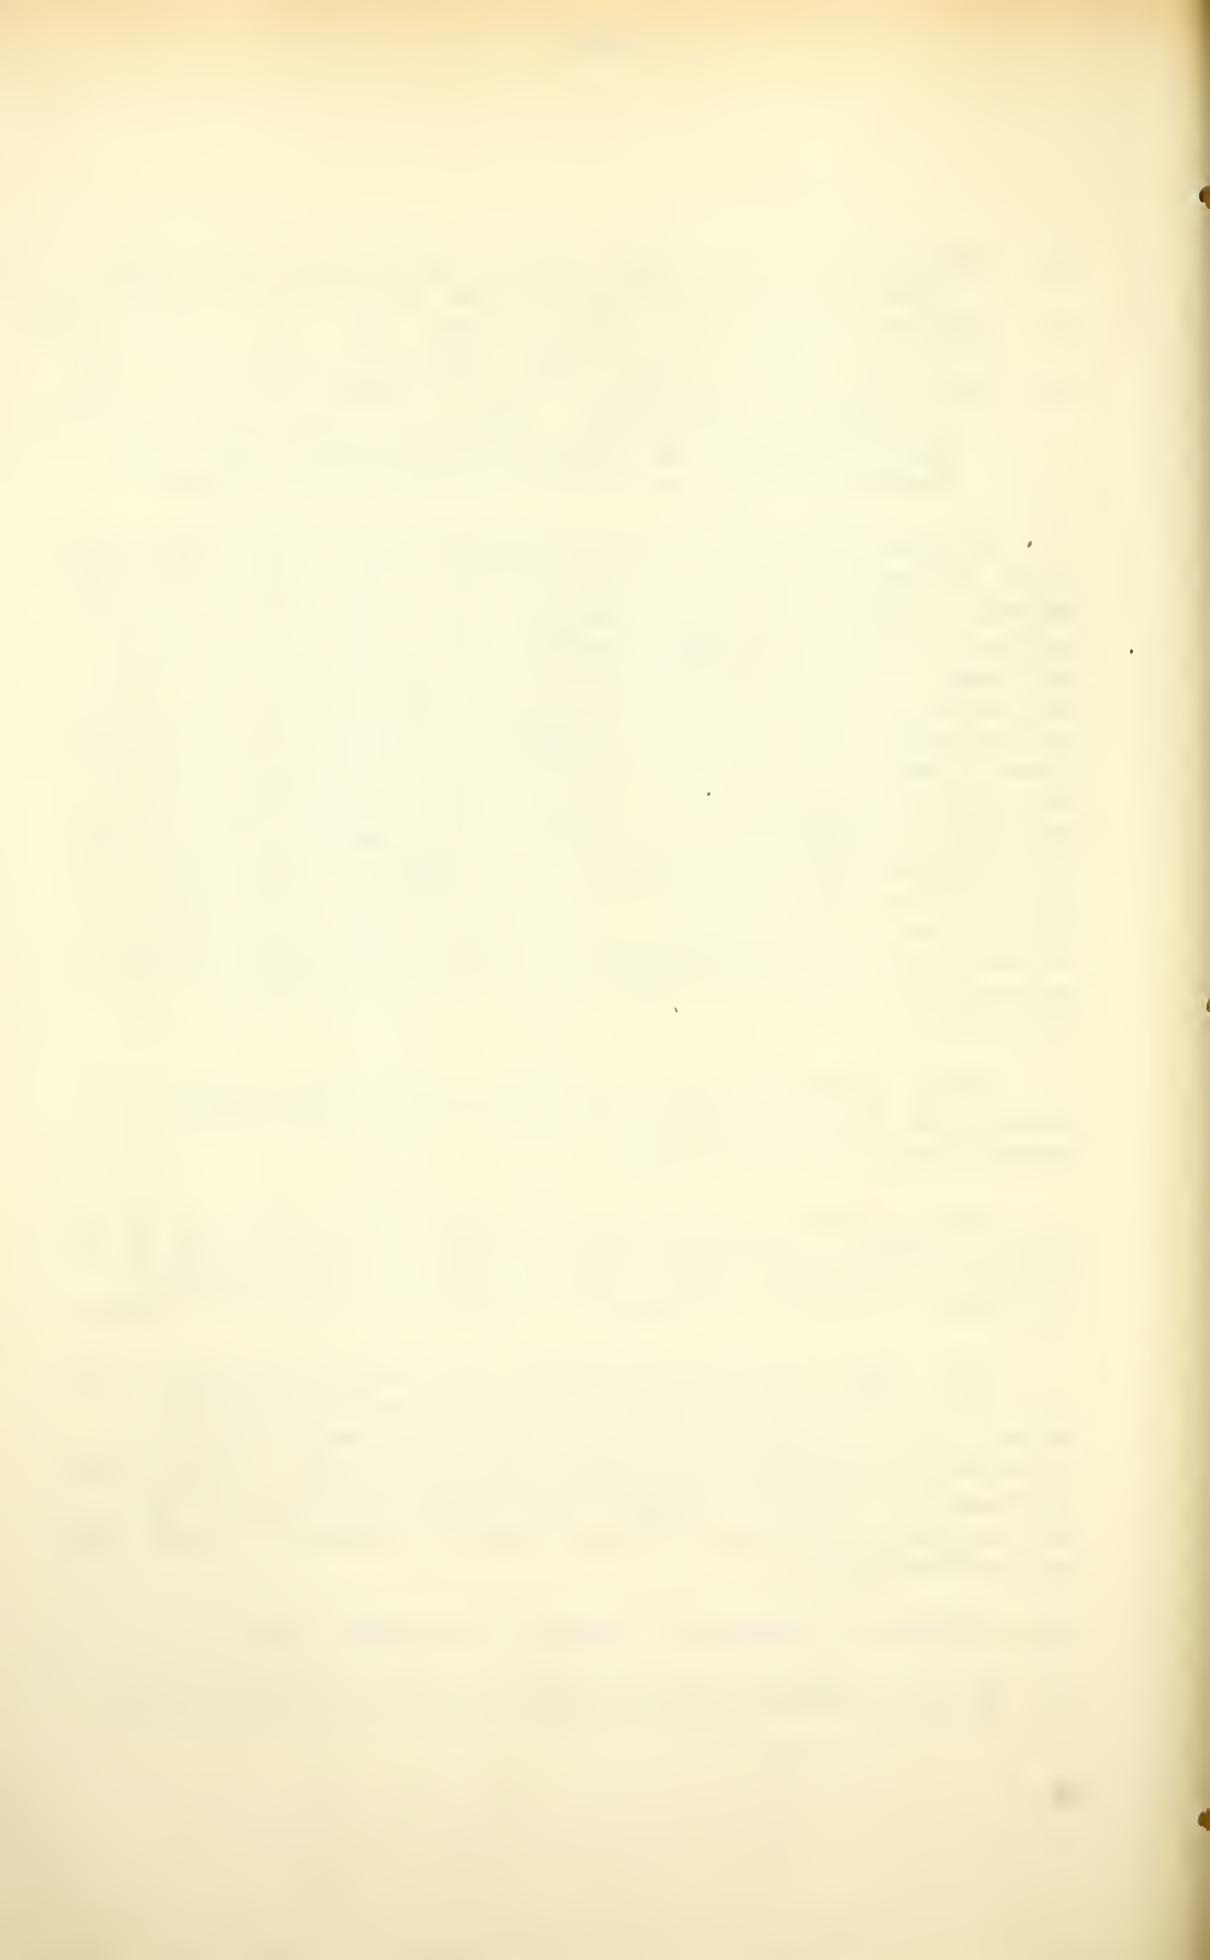

Oliver later occupied the original cabin built by his grandfather at the old home until about 1858, when he built a larger house on the same site.

John J. later, the eldest son, lived nearly all his life in Crosby township, of which he was trustee. In the late war he was a member of Company C. 6th Ohio Infantry, and was honorably discharged. He and his wife were members of the Unitarian Church.

Thos. Moon later, the youngest son, was but sixteen years old at the time of his father's death. He remained at home, assisting on the farm, and when the property was divided, he received a seventy-five acres fall to his share, which he has increased but always adds to. Mr. later was elected to Ohio legislature in 1870, and has held various offices of public trust and responsibility.

HISTORICAL SKETCH

OF THE CHESTNUT RIDGE BAPTIST CHURCH, FORMERLY A FRIENDSHIP CHURCH.

(From "The Baptist," Baltimore, September 26, 1854.)

The above named church was organized in the year of our Lord seventeen hundred and forty-two (1742), and Henry Voter is represented as its founder, as no doubt is true. He was first not called at that time "General Baptist" in contradistinction from "Separate Baptists." He was a layman, and the historian tells us that he bore an excellent character. He died from infirmities in 1750. Soon after his death and in his absence he invited Baptist ministers to preach in his house, several who at that time were proselyted to his sentiments, and after many years the church was formed, it being the first Baptist Church organized in the state of Maryland. Among the ministers who officiated with this infant church as pastor or supply in early times were George Ministry, from Pennsylvania, George Palmer, every evening preaching others. Most wonderful eloquence of the gospel, another George, of Massachusetts, who was converted under the preaching of Millerfield, David Brice, of Pennsylvania, John Morris, of Maryland, and others who settled with the Boston Baptist Church in Loudoun County, Va., and John Jones, often preached the gospel to these fitful dissenters, as they journeyed from state to state, for it was no uncommon thing in that day for Baptist preachers to travel on horseback from one hundred to three and four hundred miles, preaching as they went, as opportunity offered, in private dwellings and barns, but still more frequently in open groves, under Indian corn, with a rustic board sheltered over by a tree for a shelter, and the vaulted heavens above for a cathedral; a poor powerless old God bating the labors of those fitful men! Mr. Voter may be justly regarded as the author of the first church, and of the Baptist interest in Maryland. His liberal assistance in building the house of worship and his gifts of land to the church on which the house stands, and to the ministers as well, are emblematic peculiar works of his liberality.

The cause immediately after its organization increased very fast and spread to Maryland over the country, and soon extended over to Frederick and Frederickton in Virginia; indeed, that in four years the number of communicants amounted to 161.

The Frederick church in Maryland, and Frederickton church in Loudon County, were formed to a great extent out of members moving from Voter's church in Maryland to Virginia, and out of which grew the "Old Frederick Association," one of the oldest and most influential bodies of Baptists in the state for nearly a century.

The covenant entered into by this people, that is to say, by the "Christian Free Baptist Church," now later's, and which was presented to the Governor and Court of this then Catholic Province, when the society was taken under the protection of the "Toleration Laws," was expressed in the following terms:

We, the humble professors of the gospel of Christ, baptized upon a declaration of faith and repentance, believing the doctrines of general redemption (or the free grace of God extended to all mankind), do hereby solemnly, seriously and sincerely, in the presence of the searcher of all hearts and before the world, covenant, agree, bind and settle ourselves into a church, to hold, abide by and contend for the faith we deliver'd to the saints, named by the best reformed churches in England, Scotland and elsewhere, especially as published and maintained in the form and confession of the Baptists in Geneva and Scotland, except in instant time, modes of church government, the doctrine of ecclesiastical reservation and subscription. We do also bind ourselves forever to defend and live up to the Protestant religion, &c. & do also engage with our lives and fortunes to inform the world and glorify our glorious sovereign, His Majesty, & his and his spouse forever, and to obey His laws, freely submitting ourselves to all his authority whatsoever, and giving cause to who cause, honor to who honor, tribute to whom tribute is due. We do further declare that we are not in any thing contrary, nor being at war in defense of our sins and pecuniery, when in any place arrested, but that we do improve and will obey the laws of this province. We further do bind ourselves to follow the patterns of our brethren in Geneva, to maintain order, regularity and discipline in our church, especially that excellent directory of the Rev. Francis Stanier, entitled "The Gospel Honor and Chapel Manual, dedicated to the Church in the city of Lincoln, by John and Francis Stanier." We also engage that all persons upon joining our society shall give consent to and subscribe this our solemn league and covenant. Subscribed by the whole church at Canterbury this 10th day of July, 1742.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF SALTILLO, MEXICO.

"a place where the Baptist people of Sonora gathered for worship amid the forest primeval. - Fair silent seclusion of faith.--the Dead, to the end of the world. Built by Henry Foster in the year 1772."

(From the "Tribune-American," February 11, 1870.

Set in Salinao county, on an elevation known as "Forest Hill," stands an ancient Baptist Church. In the centre of a ridge a grove of majestic oaks, in the shade of which at every hour fifteen or twenty from this city congregate. Various nations of the state come to this little church to worship at the shrine where so many have died. Some of two or more generations are worshipped, and to this spot the most ardent consecration and most self-sacrifice has been given. The river and trees in the forest.

This church, so unknown in its size, is second only in its simplicity, in that of Jesus' own tabernacle. It was built after the lines of Christ, in memory of his early days as a carpenter, built and dedicated it to his service. Since the most that we know about this old church is that it is still standing, both for the want of materials, which are often as hard to find as Virgil's, unfree speech. Therefore, it continues to be the chosen abode of all who desire to honor and glorify their Master.

The history of this building, is like unto the history of many other churches in this city which raised their sacred edifices to honor in colonial days. Back in 1737 Mr. Jerry Foster went out from this city into the woods, forests of Salinao county were covered a plantation. A portion of a ridge, of private ground, one mile away from the nearest house, sat in this grove, and the earliest visitors to his home said "Come to this high elevation of 'Forest Hill,' the plantation was in those days a lone spot on the salt hills back, top the crest of the latter in a great city, and the spread of its population, was then at least equal to that of a large city. A short distance up the mountain, stood the first colony of religious men, as General Baptists, called so in those early days to distinguish them from particular Baptists. A man a religious man, and held up his hand in service. A Baptist minister was always the last visitor to cross his threshold, and his hospitality was prodigious. When such a minister came, his friends and neighbors were notified, and they gathered at Mr. Jerry's door to join with him in worship. At time one of the friends that attended these services was Foster, and you formed a little congregation. Mr. Jerry then endeavored to build a suitable place of worship, where all could gather, and those regular services could be kept. He labored over his great plantation and sometimes that there was no more beautiful rock upon it than was found on the crest of

On stony ridge. So he selecter there, in the heart of a magnificent grove of oak trees, a site for his meeting-house. At the foot of this grove there ran a little stream of water, since named "Moemater's Run," whose clear depths reflected the stately trunks of the oak trees and whose cool, pure water quenched the thirsts of man and beast when they should come from afar to gather at the church. In the midst of these beautiful pastoral surroundings Mr. Mather built his meeting-house, and on November 16th, 1742, he deeded the house, with one acre of land for a burying place, "to the congregation forever, to the end of the world." The trustees to whom he made the deed were Henry Lovell, John West, William Johnson and Willi Brown.

A Confession of Faith.

The covenant under which the church was organized was very simple, it runs as follows:

"I, the undersigned professor of the gospel of Christ, basing on a declaration of faith and profession, believin' the doctrine of general redemption (of free grace of God to all mankind) do hereby, seriously, frankly and sincerely, in the presence of the recre of all saints, and before the world, confess, agree, sign and settle ourselves into a church, to make publick and confess our faith once delivered to the saints.

"We in former years have not admitted to our pates, nor will we in future, if any in our country, or in any place called together; also that we do, now, and will always use the name of this provincial.

"We also require that all persons, on joining our society, shall visibly confess the same to the said saints in our covenant

A Legal Document.

The instrument of the formal transfer of the property to the trustees of Mr. Mather, or the Association, is lost or missing. The following are transcripts of originals, preserved among law documents at Lewiston:

Henry Water to Henry Lovell and others. Conveyance.

This indenture, made this sixteenth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and forty-two, between Henry Water, in the province of Maine, and County of Franklin, planter, on the one part, and Henry Lovell, John West, William Johnson and Willi Brown, in the province and County aforesaid, on the other part, that the said Henry Water, for and in consideration of one millings sterlin, to him in hand paid by the said Henry Lovell, John West, William Johnson and Willi Brown, after this, the receipt whereof is,
